SURVEY OF EDUCATION 2023

Most rural kids aged 14-18 can't do Class 3 math, 25% can't read

R RADHIKA
New Delhi, January 17

MORE THAN HALF of 14- to 18-year-old youths in rural India cannot solve a simple three-digit division problem that's usually taught in Class 3-4 and struggle with everyday skills, including determining time and doing basic calculations, shows the latest edition of the Annual Status of Education Report (ASER) released on Wednesday.

The findings point to a huge skill deficit among adolescents, many of them only a few years away from entering the job market.

The 2023 report reveals that children in India continue to struggle with basic reading and arithmetic skills well into their teenage years, even after reaching Class 10 and higher secondary levels of education (Classes 11 and 12).

Overall, of all youth aged 14-18, a quarter (26.5%) could not read a Class 2-level textbook in their regional language, and a little less than half (42.7%) could not read sentences in English.

Of those who can read, over a quarter (26.5%) did not understand the meaning of what they were reading.

Basic mathematics remains the big challenge. More than half of the surveyed students (56.7%) could not solve a simple 3-digit by 1-digit division problem. The ability to do division is seen as a proxy for the ability to do basic arithmetic operations.

Further, ASER 2023 assessed the ability of youngsters to apply basic arithmetic and reading skills to everyday calculations, reading, understanding written instructions and financial calculations. Worryingly, less than half of the youngsters (around 45%) could calculate the number of hours a child had slept based on the time she went to bed at night and woke up in the morning. In another everyday task, of measuring an object with a ruler,

85% of those surveyed could calculate the length of an object correctly if it was placed at the '0' mark on the ruler. But when the object was moved and placed elsewhere on the ruler, less than 40% could give the right answer. Two-thirds of the surveyed youth (65.1%) were able to read functional instructions on a packet of ORS solution.

Across all tasks that test youngsters' ability to apply basic numeracy and reading skills, male candidates tend to do better than women.

The poor foundational skills come even though young people are remaining in school longer than ever before. ASER 2023 finds that overall, 86.8% of youth between the age of 14 to 18 years are enrolled in an educational institution, belying a major worry during the pandemic — that with livelihoods threatened, older children would drop out of school.

Emphasising the importance of foundational learning and life skills, "not just for academic advancement but also to traverse daily life", ASER Centre Director Wilima Wadhwa said, "At some level, India is in a unique position right now... For India to become the world's third largest economy, the quality of our labour force has to keep pace with our developmental needs. We can only reap the demographic dividend associated with a young population if our youth are well supported to achieve their aspirations and participate productively in the growth process of the economy."

3 tactics India needs to pass German test

MIHIR VASAVDA
New Delhi, January 17

TO REACH PARIS, India will have to do something they haven't in close to a decade — conquer Germany. The ball-sichern-ing (ball-protecting, translated loosely), horizontal-playing, all-controlling, rising-from-the-ashes Germany.

When they last did that in regulation time, back in February 2015, India were nobody in women's hockey.

They barely played big teams, seldom won against them and the Olympics was something they'd only heard and seen but never experienced.

Yet, it was also a period of hope. A golden generation of players was expected to take the women's team to previously unforeseen heights, which they did. Step after giant step.

Rising first to become an Asian force, making it to consecutive Olympics after not gracing on the grandest stage for more than three decades and once there, coming within sniffing distance of a medal.

They did all that and more. But Germany remained a team out of India's reach. The win in Valencia that February afternoon was the only time India have beaten them in regulation time in the last 20 years as per the International Hockey Federation records.

When they met most recently, a month ago on December 19, 2023, Germany won comfortably; 3-1 the scoreline read.

This puts into perspective the enormous challenge Savita Punia — one of the two players in the current side who knows what it takes to traverse daily life, ASER Centre Director Wilima Wadhwa said, "At some level, India is in a unique position right now... For India to become the world's third largest economy, the quality of our labour force has to keep pace with our developmental needs. We can only reap the demographic dividend associated with a young population if our youth are well supported to achieve their aspirations and participate productively in the growth process of the economy."

What makes Germany so good? Sjoerd Marijne, the Dutch coach who guided India to a fourth-place finish at the Tokyo Olympics, explains to The Indian Express: "They are very good at ball possession and protect

Play 'give-and-go hockey', retain possession, and curb Germany's flanks-switching style, say former captain Rani Rampal and former coach Sjoerd Marijne

it with their body. They call it ballsichern, something that's taught from the youth level."

"When they control the ball, it's very difficult to snatch it from them," says former India captain Rani Rampal. "And when we do get the possession, we have to work even harder to keep it because they will pounce from all sides," she tells this newspaper.

Germany, they both add, are solid while defending. "But they aren't defensive," Rani says. "Their forwards also defend well. This style gives them a solid base to launch attacks."

What makes Germany different — and hence difficult — is that they prefer playing horizontally rather than going vertically like India do. They will keep the ball on one flank, control it until they find space in the front, always on the lookout to swiftly switch the flanks and take advantage of open spaces to attack.

"Because of their strong basic skills, they do that really well," Marijne, who is a performance coach with a football club in Belgium's top division, says.

"It means that as the opposition, you have to run more to cover spaces. And if you don't close one side, you are at risk. When they are in rhythm, playing stick-to-stick and taking fast restarts, they will create a numerical advantage in different zones of the pitch," Marijne adds, explaining Germany's attacking template.

India's defence — with Monika, Udita Duhan and Nikki Pradhan at the heart — has stood out against New Zealand and Italy in the group stage. But Germany will be their toughest test yet in the tournament.

The bumpy turf in Ranchi might make it difficult for Germany to play their usual style to quickly switch flanks and overload.

India will be on the lookout for that to steal possession and launch counterattacks. But Germany's horizontal structure means that if a player loses the ball, there's always someone to back her up.

"Hence, they might not be very vulnerable to counterattacks," Marijne says.

As a player, Rani says she went into the matches against Germany knowing the team would have to run more than other games, endure long spells without the ball and remain patient. "You have to really work hard to get anything out of them," Rani says.

Marijne adds that the midfielders and forwards will have to be careful to not go one-on-one with German defenders because of their strong tackling abilities. "They should instead play give-and-go hockey; play a pass to a teammate, run around the defender and receive the ball back," Marijne adds.

It requires telepathic understanding between players but that's how India played against Australia in the quarterfinals of the Tokyo Olympics, which remains one of the team's biggest wins ever.

Marijne and Rani say the team nearly ticked all the boxes during the match against Germany in Tokyo. The team, under Schopman, raised their game even in the Pro League matches post-Tokyo. Yet, they could not beat them largely because they were unable to seize the moment.

"Germany have really experienced players who thrive under pressure. They have great individuals in the team," Rani says. Marijne adds: "In our matches, the difference was the experience of the players, especially in goal-scoring situations. They will be smarter in the key moments of the match. But I also believe this team has gained experience over the years. So they should do well this time."

India's forward line has been a hit-and-miss in Ranchi. Salima Tete has been a constant threat while Lalremiam and Neha Goyal have used their speed intelligently. But India have lacked the final pass in the attacking third and against a team like Germany, who won't give many scoring chances, it'll come down to how efficient the attackers will be.

And that, eventually, could be the difference. India haven't beaten Germany in almost a decade. There's an Olympic-size carrot dangling in front of them to end the dubious run.
