Spotlight on tainted villa of Nazi mastermind Berlin can't give away

BERLIN (AGENCY)

Behind thickets of beech trees, overgrown with nettles and beset by a blue lake an hour north of Berlin, a villa that once belonged to a Nazi mastermind quietly rots. No one knows what to do with the estate beside the Bogensee lake in Brandenburg. It was built for Joseph Goebbels, the Nazi propaganda minister, by his grateful country before the start of World War II. Owned by the State of Berlin today, it has stoudered extensively on the public's tab, along with a set of dramatic dormitories built later by the Communist Party to house an indoctrination school. It is a nearly 20-acre campus that echoes with the pasts of two totalitarian regimes. Too burdensome for the state to continue carrying, prohibitively expensive for most real estate prospectors and tainted by history, Berlin has given up on selling or developing it. Instead, it has offered to give the Nazi mansion away, free. (The taker, of course, would be subject to the government's approval.) In exasperated comments made to Parliament this spring, Stefan Evers, the state's senator for finance, made the pitch take it off our hands, or we will tear it down, setting off a flurry of interest in prospective takers from around the globe. There were enquiries from a dermatologist who wanted to open a skin-care centre and from a few bargain hunters, Evers said recently in an interview.

Gaza cease-fire talks to kickstart. Why is a deal so elusive? JERUSALEM (AGENCY) International mediators are hoping to kickstart stalled cease-fire negotiations between Israel and Hamas with a new round of talks meant to finally clinch a deal between the sides. But the chances of a breakthrough appear slim. The new talks are set to begin Thursday, but Israel and Hamas have been mulling an internationally-backed proposal for more than two months that would wind down the 10-month-long war and free the roughly 110 hostages still held in Gaza. The indirect talks have not advanced substantially during that time and sticking points remain. New terms put forward have complicated progress. And Hamas has yet to say outright whether it will participate in the new round. Meanwhile, the fighting in Gaza rages on, the hostages continue to languish in captivity, and fears of an all-out regional war involving Iran and one of its regional proxies, Hezbollah, have surged. On May 31,

PM Fumio Kishida to step down in September as scandals prove too much

TOKYO (AGENCY)

Japanese Prime Minister Fumio Kishida said he will step down in September, ending a three-year term marked by political setbacks and paving the way for a new premier to address the impact of rising prices. "I will continue to do everything I can as prime minister until the end of my term in September," Kishida said in a televised press conference on Wednesday to announce his decision not seek reelection as Liberal Democratic Party (LDP) leader. His decision to quit triggers a contest to replace him as party boss, and by extension as the leader of the world's fourth-biggest economy. Kishida's public support eroded amid revelations about the party's ties to the controversial Unification Church, and more recently, unrecorded political donations made at LDP fundraising parties. "He's been a dead man walking for quite some time," said Michael Cucek, a professor specialising in Japanese politics at Temple University in Tokyo. "There was no way to add up the numbers so that he would get reelected," he added. The successor the LDP chooses will have to unite a fractious ruling group and tackle likely further increases in living costs, escalating geopolitical tensions with China, and the potential return of Donald Trump as US president next year. As the country's eighth-longest serving post-war leader, Kishida led Japan out of the COVID.
