'BORING' LEGACY COMPANIES SEEN AS DEFENSIVE AMID UNCERTAINTY

Cisco & IBM show old-tech firms can be winners in AI

RYAN VLASTELICA
February 18

WHILE MANY OF the biggest and most popular technology stocks have stumbled out of the gates in 2025, some of the sector's legacy names are drawing renewed attention.

Companies like Cisco Systems, International Business Machines, and Oracle are outperforming this year, as they signal that they, too, can be winners in the crucial growth area of artificial intelligence.

These stocks are also attracting investors with cheap valuations and appealing dividend yields compared with the more familiar AI winners, who are left with higher bars to clear after prolonged outperformance. A murky outlook for interest rates and import tariff tensions only underscore their appeal.

"In a time of economic uncertainty, these more mature companies offer attributes that are defensive and very desirable," said Stephen Bersey, head of technology research at HSBC. "At the same time, there is more AI-related demand, which is helping to boost their growth,

WIDELY BULLISH ON AI

Legacy tech firms benefiting from AI growth

Cisco and IBM offer >2.5% dividend yields

Cisco sees strong AI infrastructure demand

Cisco's revenue growth expected at 4.8% in 2025

IBM forecasts strong revenue and AI bookings

Oracle a key cloud player with Microsoft

- Cisco hits highest since 2000 due to AI demand
- Magnificent 7 index up 2%, others negative
- Nvidia up 6.2%, driven by AI which had otherwise been diminished."

Take Cisco. The seller of networking gear had become something of an afterthought in the current tech landscape, with shares still well below their dot-com era peak. However, its results last week beat expectations, and it gave an outlook that showed strong demand related to the building of AI infrastructure. The news sparked a rally that took shares to their highest since 2000.

Compared with the Magnificent

Seven group of tech megacaps, the sector's legacy names have lagged behind in the S&P 500's AI-powered advance to multiple record highs. Recent trends have been more positive.

Cisco is up 10% this year, including Tuesday's gain of 1%, while IBM has risen 19% and Oracle has risen 59%. The Bloomberg Magnificent 7 Total Return Index is up 2%, while Apple, Microsoft Corp., Alphabet Inc., and Tesla are all negative on the year. Nvidia, the chipmaker at the heart of the AI boom, is up 6.2%.

Rediscovering an old favorite like Cisco has emerged as something of an investment theme on Wall Street. IBM, another stock that went years between records, has charged higher in recent months. Its own forecast last month projected strong revenue growth and a jump in AI-related bookings, and it followed that up with a bullish long-term sales outlook.

"It was very unloved — then started hitting numbers, buying software and showed it is likely to grow 5%+," wrote Melius Research analyst Ben Reitzes. Oracle has a similar new lease on life, with investors viewing it as a major player in cloud computing, alongside much-bigger peers like Microsoft, Amazon.com Inc., and Alphabet.

Results from the Magnificent Seven largely failed to reassure investors that their heavy spending on AI will deliver a major earnings boost any time soon. While Wall Street remains widely bullish on the group and its long-term potential with AI, current levels of spending and growth have made it harder to justify valuations.

CT 2025: Pakistan begin title defence at home

THE ICC MEN'S Champions Trophy 2025 gets under way today, following an eight-year hiatus. Popularly called the mini-World Cup, the eight-team tournament will be hosted by defending champions Pakistan for the first time, as multi-nation cricket of this magnitude returns to the politically-unstable nation after nearly three decades. Last time, they co-hosted the 1996 World Cup alongside India and Sri Lanka.

South Africa won the inaugural edition in 1998. India & Sri Lanka shared the honours in 2002. Australia won back-to-back titles in 2006 and 2009. India were crowned champions in 2013 followed by Pakistan four years later.

OpenAI weighing special voting rights to block hostile takeovers

REUTERS
February 18

OPENAI IS CONSIDERING granting special voting rights to its non-profit board to preserve the power of its directors, as the ChatGPT-maker fends off an unsolicited takeover bid from Elon Musk, Financial Times reported on Tuesday.

Chief executive officer Sam Altman and board members are evaluating new governance measures as the company transitions to a traditional for-profit structure, the report said, citing people with direct knowledge of the discussions. OpenAI did not immediately respond to a Reuters request for comment.

While no firm decisions have been made, the move could help OpenAI block future hostile takeover attempts, including from Musk, who co-founded the company with Altman but later departed.

On Friday, OpenAI rejected a $97.4 billion acquisition offer from a consortium led by Musk, saying the startup is not for sale and dismissing any future bids as disingenuous.

Sam Altman, CEO, OpenAI

Musk's offer is his latest effort to prevent OpenAI from becoming a profit-driven company as it seeks more funding to stay competitive in the artificial intelligence race.

If implemented, the special voting rights would allow the non-profit board to overrule major investors, including backers like Microsoft and SoftBank, ensuring it retains decision-making power, the report said.

RIL sets its benchmark again

● Retains India's most valuable tag in Burgundy Private-Hurun India 500 report

ANUPREKSHA JAIN
Mumbai, February 18

RELIANCE INDUSTRIES (RIL) has retained its position as India's most valuable company for the fourth consecutive year, as per the latest report released by Axis Bank's private banking unit Burgundy Private and Hurun India. The Mukesh Ambani-led company was followed by Tata Consultancy Services and HDFC Bank.

The 2024 Burgundy Private and Hurun India 500 report recorded the total market capitalization of Reliance Industries at ₹17.5 lakh crore, higher than Tata Consultancy Services and HDFC Bank which were ranked second and third with a market value of ₹16.1 lakh crore and ₹14.2 lakh crore respectively.

The combined value of the 2024 Burgundy Private Hurun India 500 companies amounted to ₹324 lakh crore ($3.8 trillion), which is higher than the GDP of India and the combined GDP of the UAE, Indonesia, and Spain. The fourth edition of the report shows a 43% jump in the qualification threshold to ₹9,580 crore.

Significantly, for the first time since the list's inception, every company featured is valued at least $1 billion, despite the depreciated rupee.

Financial service companies continue to hold top positions and remain top gainers, according to the report. Indian Banks and financial companies are reasonably well positioned with strong balance sheets and higher return on equity (ROE), said Arun Choudhary, group executive, affluent banking, NRI, cards and payments.
