ANC below 50% after partial count

SOUTH AFRICA POLLS

AP / JOHANNESBURG

Partial results in South Africa's national election put the long-ruling African National Congress at below 50% of the vote as counting continued Thursday...

was below the 50% mark in the early results.

"I think we are seeing a massive change in South African politics," political analyst Prof. Susan Booysen said on SABC TV...

The electoral commission was projecting a 70% voter turnout in this election, up from the 66% in the last national election in 2019.

This election was seen as a direct referendum on the unbroken three-decade rule of the ANC.

With around 20% of votes counted and declared, it was only a partial picture after Wednesday's election.

Some analysts said the early results already presented a never-before-seen picture with regards to how far the long dominant ANC
