How Bangladesh crisis points at global power play in Bay of Bengal

The Bangladesh political impasse does not show any sign of recovery any time soon, though much hope has been pinned on Muhammad Yunus, a Nobel Laureate in Economics. Inarguably, it is quite early to assess an interim government. The passion and promise for a dramatic difference with Professor Yunus at the helm of politics fit the propaganda of the protesters. The ground reality is full of paradoxes. The shameful August political episode led to the country's complete collapse.

Anarchists quickly hijacked the protest by the angry and agitated students on the reservation issue. Looting, arson, vandalism, and planned attacks on the Hindus and other minorities became the new normal. Muhammad Yunus' quick jump into politics to restore normalcy shows no visible difference. The evident forms of violence have become more subtle. The antagonism against the Hindus and India has not seen any changes. The platitudes of Yunus are for media exhibitionism for perception building. It gives no dividend in any significant sense.

Amid the whirlpool of things, what undergirds the political collapse is the foreign interventions. The obvious ones are the US and China. Sheikh Hasina has already made a reference to the US intervention and the latter's interest in St Martin Island. China has seemingly escaped the critical lens. She has not critically mentioned China or its role in the Bangladesh crisis. The US-China rivalry and competition in the Indo-Pacific are out in the open. This has reached the Bay of Bengal. The waters of the Bay of Bengal have become geopolitically and geostrategically hotter. The political breakdown and the rise of radicals to destabilise the country is a surface convulsion in Bangladesh. The latent points to the collision of interests involving the US and China. The Indian control over the waters of the Bay of Bengal is quite deep and carries a strong history. The US intends to ensure its stable presence in the region to control China and its expansionist streak.

Bangladesh's indifference to the US' strategic blueprints for the Bay of Bengal saw the unleashing of the former's covert and soft methodologies of destabilising a country. The strategic Mongla and Chittagong ports have seen significant Indian presence for export and import-related activities. The current political tension has not seen any significant change in the nature of the MoU between India and Bangladesh.

However, the symptoms are not clear enough to diagnose the shifting moods of Bangladesh under Muhammad Yunus and his external accomplices. The US is expected to make significant entry into the waters of Bangladesh through Muhammad Yunus. This will minimise Chinese brinkmanship in the region. But the chequered history that India shares with the US and the latter's unpredictability and the persistence of its alliance with Pakistan constitute a compelling ground for doubt and apprehension. India's relationship with the US has not seen its best. India exercises much caution while steadying its relationship with the US. Its partnership with Russia and its political philosophy of non-alignment in times of conflict have neither repayment of the loan taken. Sri Lanka and Pakistan are unambiguous instances of debt-trap diplomacy. Through Pakistan, China reaches the Arabian Sea. The China-Pakistan Economic Corridor (CPEC) enables this connectivity. For the Bay of Bengal, most littoral states have fallen mainly into its BRI expansionist trap. The littoral countries of the Bay of Bengal are India, Bangladesh, Sri Lanka, Myanmar, Thailand, Malaysia, and Indonesia. India's non-participation in the Belt and Road Initiative Leviathan and its growing confidence and geostrategic advantage to give China a checkmate in the Himalayan space and the Indian Ocean have intensified the latter's resolve to restrict the former's sphere of activity.

Therefore, it makes necessary preparations to exercise its presence in the Bay of Bengal through its littoral states. Bangladesh, Sri Lanka, Myanmar, Thailand, Malaysia, and Indonesia are part of China's BRI framework. China exercises its control over the Bay of Bengal littoral states. Beyond its BRI commitments, it interferes with the critical strategic space of these countries, seriously compromising their territorial integrity and sovereign strength.

Doctors' strike leaves patients confused

Ahmedabad, Resident doctors in Ahmedabad Civil Hospital have started a strike over stipend. Due to the strike, doctors are away from emergency and OPD. As doctors are not present, the patients coming to the OPD are facing hardship. Patients are coming to the OPD from outside including Gujarat. Those who have to wait for hours due to the strike. Still not getting treatment. A relative of a patient from Rajkot said, "My cousin is jaundiced and his stomach is filled with water." Also the liver is exhausted. But the doctor says that there will be no checkup today due to the strike. Hence we have been pushed from Rajkot. Hence the patients who came from outside have to go back. On the other hand, the youth who came to get the medical certificate for the job of Agniveer also had to stand in a long queue. So the patients were sitting in the dark with injured arms and legs for 2 hours while the lights were off in the X-ray.
