PRESENTS HERSELF AS A PRAGMATIC LEADER

Harris to chart 'new way forward'

KATIE ROGERS & REID J EPSTEIN Chicago, August 23

VICE PRESIDENT KAMALA Harris used her acceptance speech at the Democratic National Convention late on Thursday to present herself as a pragmatic leader who could unite all Americans behind a "new way forward," painting her opponent, former President Donald Trump, as a dangerous and "unserious man" whose election would alter the foundation of American democracy.

With a steady voice and a straightforward gaze, Harris, a former prosecutor, presented the lengthiest and most serious case she has made against Trump as a presidential candidate.

At each turn of the nearly 40-minute address, Harris warned that the former president's truculent behavior belied a serious and substantive threat to Americans, whether they are seeking access to reproductive health care, concerned about the safety and stability of diplomatic relationships or worried about the flow of immigrants across the nation's southern border. "With this election, our nation has a precious, fleeting opportunity to move past the bitterness, cynicism and divisive battles of the past," she said. "A chance to chart a new way forward. Not as members of any one party or faction, but as Americans."

Yet Harris did not try to sell her supporters on a presidency that would be wildly different from the one held for the past three and a half years by President Biden, who, as a candidate, fought against a leftward drift in his party during the 2020 presidential race and later pulled Harris onto the ticket.

Biden, 81, also promised to be a uniter at a time when the country was deeply divided and reeling from the coronavirus pandemic. He, too, had long embraced a "middle out, bottom up" economic philosophy focused on protecting American technology advancements, curbing the rise of global competitors and retraining workers.

On Thursday, Harris promoted policies that would address housing affordability, ideas that amount to incremental change from those Biden has laid out. But what is different now is not the policies — it is the candidate, a 59-year-old woman who took the stage to rapturous applause and vowed to push her party forward.

"I will not cozy up to tyrants and terrorists, like Kim Jong-un, who are rooting for Trump," Harris said at one point. (Trump, for his part, responded to the speech on his social media site by saying, "The tyrants are laughing at her, she's weak and ineffective.")

The section of her speech dedicated to the war in Gaza generated one of the biggest applause lines of the night from the convention crowd — and served as a capstone to a week in which pro-Palestinian demonstrators marched near the United Center and a small group of delegates protested the war from inside the arena grounds.

Time has come for Fed to cut rates, says Powell

BLOOMBERG August 23

CHAIR JEROME POWELL said the time has come for the Federal Reserve to cut its key policy rate, affirming expectations that officials will begin lowering borrowing costs next month and making clear his intention to prevent further cooling in the labour market.

"The time has come for policy to adjust," Powell said on Friday in the text of a speech at the Kansas City's Fed's annual conference in Jackson Hole, Wyoming.

"The direction of travel is clear, and the timing and pace of rate cuts will depend on incoming data, the evolving outlook and the balance of risks."

The Fed chief also acknowledged recent progress on inflation, which has resumed moderating in recent months after stalling earlier in the year: "My confidence has grown that inflation is on a sustainable path back to 2%," he said, referring to the central bank's inflation target.

in their pricing for the total rate cuts they foresee through the end of 2024, at about 98 basis points. Odds also remained steady for a quarter-point cut in September.

While the remarks provided some clarity for financial markets in the near term, they offered few clues as to how the Fed might proceed after its September gathering.

Still, the speech confirmed the Fed is on the cusp of a key turning point in its two-year battle against inflation. For most of that time, the labour market proved surprisingly sturdy, giving officials room to focus doggedly on lowering inflation toward the central bank's 2% target.

Jerome Powell, Fed Chair

The Fed has held its benchmark rate in a range of 5.25%-5.5% — its highest level in more than two decades — for the last year in support of that goal, propping up borrowing costs across the economy.

Yet just as inflation has neared its target, cracks have appeared on the employment front, prompting several Fed officials to worry that higher rates now pose a threat to the economy's continued strength. Warning signals included a disappointing July jobs report that rattled financial markets.

"We do not seek or welcome further cooling in labor market conditions," Powell said, adding that the slowdown in the labor market was "unmistakable."
