Gold demand loses glitter this Diwali, jewellers offer discounts

An underrated but underrated Kiwi

RAGHAV AGGARWAL & RAJESH BHAYANI New Delhi/Mumbai, October 21

AS GOLD PRICES continue to hit fresh peaks, jewellers are offering hefty discounts on making charges to shore up muted demand in the festive season. This is in sharp contrast to the pick-up in demand seen earlier this year after the centre reduced the customs duty on gold to 6% from 15%.

Gold prices surged by ₹750 to reach another record high of ₹80,650 per 10 gram in Delhi on Monday, according to the All India Sarafa Association. Extending gains for the fourth straight day, silver prices spurred by ₹5,000 to a fresh record high of ₹99,500 per kg. Globally, the yellow metal rallied for a fifth straight day, hitting a record high because of uncertainties over the US presidential elections and ongoing West Asia tensions, while silver soared near a 12-year peak. Spot gold gained 0.6% to $2,735.38 per ounce as of 11:12 GMT after hitting an all-time high of $2,736.86 earlier in the session.

"The surge in demand following the import duty cut, which coincided with some festivals, was, has been tempered by record-high prices," Kavita Chacko, research head (India) at the World Gold Council, said in an update. "market reports indicate early signs of a resurgence in gold buying due to various ongoing festivals, with demand largely being driven by wedding purchases. Retailers are active in implementing marketing campaigns to stimulate sales. There is an expectation of an increased demand from rural areas, following favourable monsoons and higher crop sowing..."

Waman Hari Petha Jewellers, said: "At such high prices, demand for jewellery is expected to be lower by 10-15%, compared to last Diwali sales." This fall follows a 30% rise in prices. He said demand does not fall in proportion with the rise in prices. So, in value terms, sales will be higher, but the volume will see a decline. He, however, expects the attraction for investing in gold coins to offset the fall in demand to some extent.

Surendra Mehta, national secretary, Indian Bullion and Jewellers Association, said, "The absence of sovereign gold bond issues so far this financial year is diverting some bond buyers to the physical gold market," given at current prices. Sanjay Jain, a jeweller in Chandni Chowk, told FE that not many customers are keen on buying new gold ornaments this year. "They are bringing in bars and biscuits and asking us to make ornaments."

is offering up to 20% off. Sheetika & Yasha, founders at Amalats Jewels, said they are offering 20% off on solitaires and 10% on smaller diamonds, including the gold-based jewellery. Malabar Gold & Diamonds is offering a 200-mg gold coin on purchase of gold worth ₹50,000. Senco Gold & Diamonds is offering ₹500 off per gram on gold jewellery, among other offers.

A bullion analyst said following a record high gold import in August, September imports were lower at 92 tonnes. The average monthly import for the month before Diwali festivals stands at 100 tonnes. "Last month, jewellers were seen cancelling orders given to manufacturers because of high prices. Demand for new jewellery in exchange for old has been on the rise and a third of sale of new jewellery is against exchange, helping jewellers to sell new designs."

High prices restrict the overall demand, but such exchanges are keeping new sales floating, he said. Elevated prices have also resulted in spot market trading at a discount to the cost of import. Discounts have widened to $2 per ounce or ₹600 per 10 gram.

THE BALL MOVED just enough. Sarfaraz Khan, on the charge and on 150, thought he was in control to launch Tim Southee over. But the ball landed an inch or two shorter than he had expected, and moved away. Late, devious movement. Small, subtle margins. The batsman mis-cue the ball to mid-off. Sarfaraz was Southee's second and last wicket of the game, but as with the first, when he castled Rohit Sharma with a three-quarter seam ball, the timeless seam-artist instigated India's collapse.

In the sunset of his career, the 35-year-old remains a grossly underrated cricketer. His name barely sneaks into discourses on the fast-bowling elite of the modern era as he did it myself," he once admitted in a podcast with stuff.co.uk. He does not churn headline-worthy sentences. Surfing his Instagram and X feeds is a futile exercise in searching for anything juicy. His former teammate and coach at Maungakarama Cricket Club, Steve Cunis, agrees, "He was always this shy boy who always kept smiling and bowling. Some of the batsmen, older than him, thought he was too soft. But when he would wind them up with the ball. He was a tough character, who never gave up his dreams."

Southee was put into a cricket club because at home, a sprawling farmhouse in Waitotira, 30-odd miles from Whangarei, he trampled the lawn where his sisters played tennis. Every weekend, his father Murray drove Tim to the cricket club in the morning and picked him up in the evening. "He used to bowl all the time, always working on some delivery or the other. He would say he would be working on his out-swinger, or a slower ball that he had picked when watching a game," he says. The quest to learn new tricks has defined his career. He burst forth with the booming out-swinger he bowled at pace. But when he shed pace to conserve his career, he mastered other tricks, like the 3-quarter seam ball and the cutter, the latter he uses to devastating effect. He also became more pragmatic as the years rolled by, ever more economical as he struggled with batsmen with unrelenting accuracy.

ON TOP GEAR ACROSS SECTORS
