COURT DUE TO RULE ON LAW BANNING TIKTOK'S FOREIGN OWNERSHIP

TikTok ruling in focus for Meta, Alphabet and Oracle investors

Adverse order may favour social media, search stocks

FELICE MARANZ December 5

TECH INVESTORS ARE girding for the latest development in TikTok's legal saga. Social media and search companies like Meta Platforms Inc. have a lot at stake, as does Oracle Corp., which counts TikTok as a big customer. The US Court of Appeals in Washington is due to issue a ruling on whether to uphold or overturn a law that requires TikTok's China-based owner to sell the app by Jan. 19, or face a ban in the US. The ruling probably won't be the end of the drama, as any outcome would likely be appealed. But traders are watching every step carefully, with TikTok's more than 170 million US users and billions of dollars in advertising revenue top of mind.

LEGAL SAGA

- US court to rule on TikTok's sale or US ban by Jan 19
TikTok ban may benefit Meta, Alphabet, Pinterest, & Snap
Meta's Reels and Pinterest's shopping features could gain users

Oracle risks losing $800M annually if TikTok is banned

- Appeals or Supreme Court action could delay resolution
TikTok may survive with 'Project Texas' or legal solutions
ByteDance refuses to sell TikTok despite US pressures

For investors in companies like Instagram parent Meta, Google parent and YouTube owner Alphabet Inc., and smaller rivals like Pinterest Inc. and Snap Inc., a result that weakens TikTok would be a big positive. The company, owned by ByteDance Ltd., is used by about a third of US adults—and a majority of Americans under 30—and is growing more rapidly than competitors, according to Pew Research Center surveys. Upholding the law would be a "clear victory for Meta shares," according to Matt Stucky, chief equity portfolio manager at Northwestern Mutual Wealth Management. Consensus estimates have baked in TikTok competition through 2026, offering "all upside" for Meta stock, Stucky said. Meta's Instagram features a TikTok rival product known as Reels. Meta, which is up more than 70% this year, hit an intraday record in Thursday morning trading. Pinterest may also capture more user attention if TikTok leaving the stock down 1.2% this year. Snap is also having a rough year, with a decline of more than 4% in early Thursday trading pushing the shares down 2.8% year-to-date. Social Media Stocks Have Had a Mixed Year | Meta has soared while Pinterest and Snap are lower. There's also upside for Alphabet, though to a lesser extent, said Stucky. The main benefit would be via search, where Google faces a lot of competition—primarily from ChatGPT. On the flip side, if TikTok is ultimately banned in the US, it would be negative for Oracle, which provides the social media app with cloud infrastructure to store and process US user data. Oracle said in June that a ban would threaten its financial results, and Evercore ISI estimated that TikTok may account for as much as $800 million of annual sales. Shares in the software firm have been on a tear this year, rising almost 80%. —BLOOMBERG

Why the series matters for Rohit and Cummins beyond the results

SRIRAM VEERA Adelaide, December 5

FOR THE PAST few days, Rohit Sharma and his men have been walking to the stadium from their hotel across a bridge over the river Torrens. It is a simple pleasure that they can't indulge in India. Even here, if anyone stops them for a selfie, it's the Indian-origan fan. They cross the road, walk past the statue of Clem Hill, a legendary cricketer from these parts, at the stadium entrance and breeze through the sliding glass doors into the arena. Thursday was a particularly burning day in Adelaide, temperatures hovering around 38-40 degrees, so hot that the Aussies wrapped up their optional net session within 20 minutes and fled.

A couple of weeks ago, in India, before the birth of his second child, Rohit was moping around alone in the dressing room at the Wankhede Stadium. His teammates had left, the Kiwis were celebrating politely in the room next door, and Rohit sat ruminating. Suddenly, things stir and change dramatically. He becomes a father again, and even as he is "holding the baby in my hands", his team is thumping the Aussies. On his flight to Perth, he asks for an internet connection to check the match scores. By the time he lands, Virat Kohli is blasting the ball onto around the park. Sometimes, a week can be really long and action-packed.

ments in that period made him almost detest the "talented" label. "Kuch matlab nahi hai yaar, that word ka" (It has no meaning). What does it even mean? You have to perform." Eventually, he would get the chances but he wasn't consistent. Especially in Tests. Then suddenly Ravi Shastri as coach, and Virat Kohli as captain offered him the chance to open in Tests. Shastri once told this newspaper about making Rohit the opener. "I had already told him but he wasn't sure. Then one day, finally, he agreed. I knew he had it in him but he worked his bloody a*** off to make it work." Shastri would know, after converting into an opener from the lower order. But Shastri's game, in a sense, was almost suited for the role. Rohit's wasn't. He made two breaks in as basic aspects as how he gripped the bat. It hurt his wrists, but he did it for hours together for days to make it a muscle memory. The bat that would flash outside off had to be controlled, and since 2018, he had turned into a classical Test opener. Until recently, in his attempt to set the agenda for the team, he had become a tad too adventurous as an opener.

In search of love

Now he has to quit that role. He had to make that decision too. "It was an easy decision as a team (to make KL Rahul open at Adelaide), not easy for me (as a player), but very easy for the team," he said, smiling, on Thursday. Not that he would care, but the four remaining Tests would also determine Rohit's relationship with Australia. He is a star in India. England too saw the best of him in 2018 as an opener. But in Australia, where he did play important knocks in 2018-19, doesn't quite have a relationship with him. Ahead of the series, various media in Australia ran promotions. Some even used Hindi and Punjabi. Kohli's face was splashed all over the papers and television. Rohit was hardly mentioned. That Australia's marketing wigs didn't think Rohit's face would be a star attraction in Australia was intriguing. Australia has always been like this. In India, we might rate and rave about cricketers performing in other countries, but the Aussies' respect comes almost only when the players score consistently in their grounds.

Ambani wedding among top YouTube trends in 2024

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA New Delhi, December 5

THE BIG FAT Indian wedding of Radhika-Anant Ambani, cricket lovers' festival IPL, gamer Ajju bhai -- whose amusing commentary entertained audiences -- and 'moye moye', a catchy melody by a Serbian artist that internet users widely used to take a funny take on adversities, grabbed spots in the chart of most-trending topics on YouTube in 2024. Indian creators and fans on YouTube didn't just break the internet, but rebuilt it with their unique voice and brand of creativity, YouTube said in its India blog on Thursday, which revealed the top trending take-aways of the year. Videos featuring "Ambani" and "wedding" in their titles amassed over 6.5 billion views in India, as fans analysed every aspect of the event, including international performances, stunning outfits, and a guest list filled with celebrities, according to the blog. "From armchair fashion critics to wedding planners offering their hot takes, this year, the after-party was online, and everyone had a VIP pass," YouTube wrote. Ajju bhai, known as Total said. The cricket fever in India did not fail to surprise, with 7 billion views generated by content related to the ICC Men's T20 World Cup and the 2024 Indian Premier League. "Creators stepped up to the crease, delivering expert analysis, hilarious commentary, and mind-blowing recreations. Fans, on the other hand, didn't just jump into the conversation -- they dissected every play, celebrated every victory, and turned those nail-biting javelin throws into YouTube gold. "And, forget the nosebleed seats! Connected TVs gave viewers front-row access to the action, turning living rooms into fan-access zones," the blog read. Another well-known name on the list was singer and actor Diljit Dosanjh, who has taken over social media feeds with his concert clips and electrifying performances. The 2024 Lok Sabha elections, veteran industrialist Ratan Tata who breathed his last on October 9, multi-starrer mythology movie Kalki 2898 AD also featured in the list. "Gulabi Sadi", Teri Baaton Mein Aisa Uljha Jiya, "Aaj ki Raat", and Vicky Kaushal's 'Tauba Tauba' emerged as the top songs on YouTube Shorts. "As pop culture continues to become more personalised, fan-driven, and participatory, YouTube serves as a launchpad for new kinds of breakthrough entertainment and a place where viewers are coming to take part in larger cultural moments in new ways.
