WORLD DIABETES DAY NOVEMBER 14
DIABETES AND WELL-BEING

ADVERTORIAL
NATCO
PUBLIC AWARENESS INITIATIVE BY NATCO

DIABETES IN PREGNANCY

Introduction: Gestational diabetes refers to a diabetes develop during the gestation period (pregnancy) which may affect the pregnancy or the health of an unborn baby. Diabetes (Diabetes mellitus) is a condition of high blood sugar caused due to either insufficient insulin production or reduced response of the body's cells to insulin produced, or sometimes both.

Symptoms: In most of the women, gestational diabetes does not produce noticeable symptoms. Thus, it becomes necessary to screen an expectant woman for the elevated blood sugar as a part of pre-natal care. It is often recommended between 24 to 28 weeks.

Risk factors: Although every pregnant woman can be a victim of gestational diabetes, but the existence of several factors may increase the risk. These may include:
• Being older than 25 years, at the time of pregnancy
• Belonging to non-white races like Indians, or Asians
• Being obese (BMI > 30) - BMI is body mass index.
• Having diabetes running through the family and/or generations
• Having prediabetes (slightly raised blood sugar).
• Having had gestational diabetes in past pregnancies.
• Having had delivered a baby weighing more than 42kg (in past pregnancy).

Complications affecting a mother/pregnant woman:
• Increased risk of developing a hypertension.
• Increased risk of pre-eclampsia.
• Increased risk of developing type 2 diabetes in the future.
• Increased risk of developing a gestational diabetes in further pregnancies.

Diagnosis of gestational diabetes may involve following tests and procedures:

• Glucose tolerance test: To measure the response of body cells to blood glucose. This involves drinking a sugary liquid and then measuring the blood sugar after about 1 hour. If the determined blood sugar level exceeds the normal range (80 to 140 mg/dL, or 22 to 32 mmol/L), a woman should be considered for the further diagnosis to confirm the gestational diabetes.
• Follow-up glucose tolerance testing: This involves measuring blood sugar, followed by fasting overnight, LHR, drinking a syrupy solution and then tracing out the blood sugar level after every hour for at least 2 hours. If readings exceed the normal range, then the woman is confirmed as having gestational diabetes.

Regular diabetic foot screening and maintaining a basic foot hygiene can prevent DFU. Among diabetes complications, foot ulcers are considered to be the most preventable ones. Diabetics should refrain from going barefoot. They should wash their feet daily with warm, soapy water. Dry the feet & apply a gentle moisturizer on feet, avoiding interdigital spaces. Check your feet daily with a mirror for sores, cuts, blisters, redness, corns. Seek prompt intervention for any corns or calluses. Trim toenails straight across & file down any sharp edges. Choose right footwear with a wide toe box & check for any sharp objects before wearing footwear. Customized footwear are helpful for diabetics with foot deformities. Wear cotton socks or of any material that pulls sweat away from skin. Avoid using a heating pad/warmer to avoid getting burnt. Regular exercise, cessation of smoking and optimal management of blood sugar levels are also important for foot health. Put your feet first and follow foot self-care behaviours for preventing diabetic foot ulcers.

PLANNING HEALTHY MEAL

Introduction: Making healthy food choices. Lots of non-starchy vegetables. Whole grain foods. Eat at least 2 times a week. Non-fat or low-fat dairy products. Water, unsweetened tea, coffee, and calorie-free diet drinks instead of drinks with sugar. Liquid oil for cooking.

Check serving size: Information on label is based on 1 serving. Keep in mind that packages often contain more than 1 serving. Look at the amount of Fat, Try to limit saturated fats and avoid trans fats. Check how many grams of total carbs are in each serving. Look at how many grams of added sugar.

Good Diabetes self-care includes following a healthy eating plan. Try to
• Eat a variety of foods in the right amounts
• Check food labels for calories, carbohydrate, total fat, and sodium amounts
• Eat regularly (small portions several times a day)
• Match how much you eat with your activity level
• Eat fewer foods high in Calories, Cholesterol, Saturated fat, trans fat, and sodium

Protect your heart!
• Your resting heart rate is usually faster than 100 beats per minute.
• You are a young man with erectile dysfunction.
• Quit smoking.
• Lose weight.
• Eat healthy, balanced diet.
• Exercise.
• Control your blood pressure.
• Improve your cholesterol.
• Set an aspirational HbA1c goal with your healthcare provider and work toward that goal.

DIABETES AND THE HEART

Introduction: You've probably heard that people with diabetes are at risk for multiple health complications, including Cardiovascular disease. As it turns out, cardiovascular disease is especially common among people with diabetes. The majority of people with type 2 diabetes eventually develop it. Although most people have heard of cardiovascular disease, what it involves, Most people think of obesity when they think of cardiovascular disease, but another strong risk factor is age. Your risk of developing cardiovascular disease goes up at age 40, but is highest after age 70. People with diabetes are 2 to 4 times more likely than others to develop cardiovascular disease. Because this risk is so high, cardiovascular disease remains the most common cause of death in people with diabetes.

Warning signs: Speak to your Doctor if you have chest discomfort when you walk or exercise. You have chest pain along with tiredness (fatigue) or shortness of breath.

Manage blood sugar: Eat a healthy diet, exercise regularly, and take your medicines as prescribed. You can also check your blood sugar levels regularly and track how your meals and activities affect them. Work with a dietitian to develop a diabetes meal plan. Get 30 minutes or more of physical activity each day. Get tested regularly, get an A1C test at least twice a year to check your average blood glucose level over the past 3 months.
• Manage blood pressure: Call back salt. Overeating salt can harm your kidneys, which filter your blood. Keep your blood pressure below 130/80 mm Hg or the target set by your doctor. Since high blood pressure is one of the significant factors that predict which diabetes will develop severe kidney disease, it is essential to take your high blood pressure pills faithfully if you do have high blood pressure. Your doctor may also recommend that you follow low-sodium diet, which reduces the work your kidneys must do. Be careful about using over-the-counter pain medications, especially nonsteroidal anti-inflammatory drugs (NSAIDs) like Ibuprofen and naproxen. Talk with your doctor about certain blood pressure medicines called ACE inhibitors and ARBs.
• Manage cholesterol: Stay in your target cholesterol range. Take statins regularly.
• Lose weight if you are overweight or obese.
• Quit tobacco, smoking in any form. Limit alcohol.
• Aim for 7 or 8 hours of sound sleep each night.
• Find ways to cope with stress, seek support or treatment for depression if necessary.
• Stay adequately hydrated always.
