Kamala Harris' advent infuses energy and hope in Democrats, but is it too late?

Editor : Mayur Bhatt

After resting for 24 days, Joe Biden finally pulled out of the presidential race on Sunday, July 21, establishing yet again that in life and politics it is impossible to dodge the inevitable! In so doing he managed to put the party and nation above his own ego and ambition, even if reluctantly, thereby salvaging his legacy and paving the way for a credible challenge to be mounted against Donald Trump's bid for a second term.

Since his disastrous performance at the June 27 debate with Trump, even his closest friends and well-wishers were urging him to step aside. Biden, however, was adamant that he was best placed to stop Trump. He claimed that his debate performance was a one-off episode and even if he didn't walk or talk like he did 40 years ago, he was hale and hearty. He tried to demonstrate his fitness through campaign rallies, meetings and interviews which naturally failed to dispel misgivings about his physical and cognitive well-being. His deteriorating condition was evident to all for months but no one was willing to say it out loud.

Almost immediately thereafter the liberal media was inundated with editorials and op-eds by widely respected journalists and public figures calling upon him to pull out of the race. In a guest essay in a leading newspaper, George Clooney, a prominent fund-raiser for the Democratic party, was frank: "We are not going to win in November with this president. On top of that, we won't win the House, and we're going to lose the Senate."

This intensified the pressure on Biden more so because it was made known that the essay had been seen, but not objected to, by Barack Obama, a party heavy weight, before its release. Many other key donors simply held back their contributions.

The scale further tilted against the President with the July 13 assassination attempt on Trump, who overnight acquired a new halo around him. As it is, he was leading in opinion polls. Now he seemed invincible. He consolidated his position further by nominating the youthful Senator JD Vance, as his running mate. The contrast between an energetic and defiant Trump, and a frail and forgetful Biden, could not become starker.

The galvanised Republicans put up an impressive show of unity and sense of purpose at the party convention last week in which Trump was formally anointed as the nominee. Nikki Haley, who was the last to drop out of the race after a spirited fight, also extended her support while suggesting that the party should broaden its reach: "We are stronger when we welcome people into our party who have different backgrounds and experiences."

In his acceptance speech, the candidate essentially claimed that he was destined to be the next President as his life was saved for a purpose, by divine intervention. He tried to rise above partisan politics by calling for healing "discord and division in our society". Done with sounding statesman-like he reverted to being himself and tore into the Democrats, terming Biden the worst President in history, who had flooded the country with illegal immigrants, ruined the economy, and plunged the world into conflicts.

Meanwhile the ranks of Democratic lawmakers wanting the President to withdraw started to swell. Some of them were tacitly nudged by former House speaker and Democratic stalwart Nancy Pelosi who advised them to follow their conscience. She publicly asked Biden to take a decision, as time was running out and also spoke to him privately.

The President felt let-down by her and Obama. To add to his woes, he was diagnosed as Covid positive on July 17 and forced to halt his campaign. Next, his inner circle reportedly apprised him of the findings of a private opinion poll that he was on a losing wicket. This was the proverbial last straw. On July 21, he issued a letter to the public acknowledging that "while it has been my intention to seek re-election, I believe it is in the best interest of my party and the country for me to stand down". He will continue as President for the remainder of his term.

In his letter he merely thanked Kamala Harris but soon thereafter endorsed her as his nominee for the presidential election. "My very first decision as the party nominee in 2020 was to pick Kamala Harris as my Vice President. And it's been the best decision I've made. Today I want to offer my full support and endorsement for Kamala to be the nominee."

In her acceptance statement the vice president displayed considerable political acumen in pledging "to earn and win this nomination". She knew that her nomination was not a done deal in the Democratic party and that the US President was not a monarch who could pass on the crown to his chosen successor. She wisely let it be known that she was ready to earn her spurs.

The development electrified the Democratic party. Support for Kamala Harris increased by the hour, pouring-in from all quarters. Significantly Bill and Hillary Clinton as well as Nancy Pelosi were quick to wholeheartedly endorse her candidature and so did most lawmakers and governors.

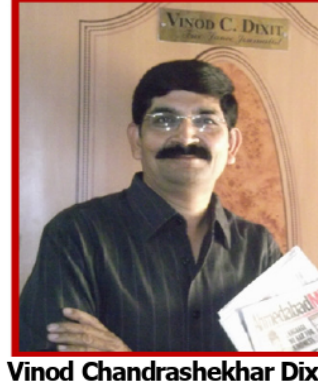

The donors gave a thumbs-up by contributing a record $81 million to her campaign, in 24 hours.

The African-American, women and Latino voters are particularly enthused by her nomination. The disposition of the white voters remains uncertain. Significantly President Barack Obama in his statement praising Joe Biden noted: "I have extraordinary confidence that the leaders of our party will be able to create a process from which an outstanding nominee emerges". He did not endorse Harris.

The Democratic party convention is slated to start on August 19, but she has already managed to receive endorsements from a majority of the 4,000 delegates. Every effort is being made to have her as the sole candidate and pre-empt others from throwing their hats in the ring. Though the party is rallying around her, Harris has not exactly set the Potomac river on fire as Vice President, to lay an automatic claim on the ticket, by virtue of Biden's endorsement.

The gravitas of the process would have been enhanced if it had been transparent and open. Democrats are fortunate to have several talented leaders and a competitive process would have been ideal to throw-up the best candidate to challenge Donald Trump who is a formidable opponent. That now seems unlikely and could become a missed opportunity!

Don't we think Congress is losing its power base across the country?

Vinod Chandrasekhar Dixit
Free-lance Journalist, Writer & Cartoonist (dixitptrakar@yahoo.in)

The decline and fall of the Congress is an arresting story written time and again; but this time the party is at the nadir of its influence in national politics. The Congress's failure to project a suitable chief ministerial candidate in most of the elections must have harmed its prospects. The results in different states are a lesson for the Congress Party; it is on a steady decline in the country's political arena. The Congress is surely losing its power base across the country, and for good reason. The results are a lesson for the Congress Party; it is on a steady decline in the country's political arena. The Congress' revival pivots on its ability to address its crisis of credibility, encouraging State leaders, and functioning as a vigorous Opposition in Parliament. Rahul Gandhi the scion of congress is an empty vessel as he has shown no understanding of any issues and depends on his coattail hangers to provide sound bites to media. The discarded and shamed politicians are being re-inducted into the party and given important positions of authority.

60 years of the Nehru Gandhi dynasty has been a curse for Mother India, they have spread, nepotism, apathy and corruption across India. In the last 70 years those who have misused the laws and Constitution have mired the country in corruption. Modi has rightly said that the Congress always tried to promote the contribution of one family - a reference to the Gandhis - and neglected contributions of Veer Savarkar, even Bhagat Singh. It is not so as there are lot of people who gave their lives during independence struggle. On 'Congress-mukt Bharat' BJP is making a deeper dent. India is completely changed in last 15 years and the new generation want development and an aggressive bold minded leader like Modi. It is clear that Rahul Gandhi's hurdles in congress are his inexperience and his inaccessibility. His image is also an aloof one. He doesn't feel he has to have his own mouthpiece website and mobile application to make himself more accessible to people. Rahul Gandhi has different plans in mind but it does not work. Why? He may seem extremely well intentioned but does that translate to an effectual administrator and visionary leader? History and statistics show that a 'dying party' can resurrect itself. The Congress party has been suffering from a leadership crisis, with Rahul Gandhi widely seen as a failure, indifferent and incompetent. Launching Priyanka is the party's last and desperate gamble. Priyanka is the most meritorious in her generation of Gandhis. Priyanka's arrival will no doubt bound to eclipse Rahul Gandhi, and possibly give the Congress party an image makeover. Priyanka Gandhi could then take the mantle of the party and lead the battle from the front in a long-drawn political fight. Widely seen as the Congress party's trump card, Priyanka Gandhi is the only option for congress to make her party's face in the Uttar Pradesh elections. In politics, ultimately public perception matters. Don't we think Sonia and Rahul should focus only on welfare of People in Congress Controlled States and stop focusing on Modi. # Hull of cleaners in Rajkot

Rajkot, There was a ruckus by the cleaners at the Rajkot Municipal Corporation office today. In which a large number of cleaning workers gathered by the municipality. Besi Ramdhun was called in the lobby outside the commissioner's chamber. Also slogans like 'Jai Bheem... Jai Bheem' and 'Hamari Maghe Puroo Karo' were raised and fierce protests were expressed. On this occasion, demands were made including the permanent recruitment of cleaning staff and the voluntary resignation of those who are disabled. Later, the cleaners staged a ruckus outside the chambers of the Standing Chairman and the Mayor. In view of the protest, there are reports that cleaners in the city have stopped cleaning. No permanent recruitment of cleaners for 27 years Manoj Khimania, president of the cleaners union, told Divya Bhaskar that there has been no permanent recruitment of cleaners in Rajkot for the last 27 years. The people of Valmiki community are being physically, mentally and financially exploited through the contract system. Despite repeated representations in this regard, no action has been taken. It is seen that the officials or officials have no interest in solving the problems of the scavengers. Due to which a large number of cleaners are protesting today. The families are facing constant hardships besides the resignation of the scavenger who has been disabled for years is allowed and his heirs are given jobs.

'Vikram' (Fireman) and 'Vetal' (De.Mayor) of Surat

Surat In the year 1985, a serial called Vikram Aur Betaal was aired on Doordarshan. One scene of this serial has not been removed from the minds of the viewers even today. In which Arun Govil, who plays Vikram (Raja Vikramaditya), has a troll i.e. actor Sajjan on his shoulders. One such scene was seen yesterday i.e. 27th January, 2024 in Surat. In which Vikram became a sub fire officer and he made the Deputy Mayor of Surat (Dr.Narendra Patil) a troll and raised his shoulders. This scene reminded everyone of 'Vikram Aur Betaal'. Day by Divyabhaskar in this matter. Attempts were made to contact the mayor, but could not be reached.

A crowd of BJP leaders found the body of the youth who drowned near Parwat Patiya in Surat city was found four days later. As soon as the water receded, a crowd of BJP leaders gathered at the scene. After removing the body of the youth, Deputy Mayor Dr. Narendra Patil left the place to go to the road. There was normal mud and mud in the space of only 2 feet between the footpath and the road. However, the sub officer of fire standing here said to the deputy mayor "Shall I take you?" While saying this, Dr.Narendra Patil smiled and raised his two legs and touched the officer's shoulders. A scene was created as if Narendra Patil had been rescued. The youth who drowned was wearing blue jeans, the color of the jeans changed when the body was exhumed. Jog Narendra Patil was also wearing blue jeans, but in such a way that mud does not get on these jeans, they were tied on the shoulders of the fireman.

Locals, including 45 jawans, pulled the body out with a rope.

The body of 21-year-old Dipesh alias Sunny Mishra of Saidham Society was found on the 4th day after he was swept into the basement of an under-construction building while wading through water on Godadara Road in Parwat village on Wednesday, July 24.

After 4 days in the water, the weight of the dead body increased from 60 kg to 240 kg. It took the locals, including 45 soldiers, an hour to drag the body out of the water with a rope. Seeing the dead body, the family did not accept the dead body and demanded action against those responsible. Due to which the police registered a case of negligence against the construction site builder Satyanarayan Rathi and his son late at night. Even though the site was running, Dipesh, who was not barricading any kind, plunged from the footpath directly into the flood water that filled the basement of the building. On the first day, 14 personnel were employed for rescue. On July 24, at 1 o'clock in the afternoon, Dipesh was walking on the footpath to go home. There was water here. But as the edge was visible, he fell into the basement space of an under-construction building adjacent to the footpath while going to his aid. Firefighters began searching for him as he waded through water that filled the two-story basement. The incident happened because the footpath was incomplete. On the fourth day, local people including 45 jawans removed the dead body. After the rain stopped and the flood water receded, the municipality pumped 25 lakh liters of water and the dead body was stuck to the ceiling in the second basement of the building.
