but the western US state is seeing a steady rise in the number of visitors to its other tourist attractions.

The number of Indian tourists to the Silver State has been rising each year, Travel Nevada officials said.

Many Indian visitors come looking for Nevada's natural wonders, like Lake Tahoe's crystal waters and forested peaks and the expanses of Highway 50, dubbed as the 'Loneliest Road in America.' "Last year there were 53,600 Indian tourists in Nevada. If one looks at the figures of the last five years, there has been a steady rise each year in the numbers of Indians visiting the state," said Tracie Barnthouse, Public Relations Specialist for Nevada Division of Tourism.

While Las Vegas is where almost three-quarters of the state's population resides, the focus for many tourists now is also on interesting spots in rest of the state, Barnthouse told PTI.

"People often view Las Vegas as just the iconic neonlit Strip," Nevada Governor Steve Sisolak said. On the Strip - the 4.02-km-long central section of Las Vegas Boulevard, one can take in entertainment spots like Caesars Palace, the MGM Grand, The Venetian, and New York-New York, which make up the city's famous skyline.

"But Nevada is much more than that. There are so many more things to offer," he said at the recent Governor's Global Tourism Summit at the Plaza Hotel in Downtown Las Vegas.

The purpose of the threeday event was to convey the message to global travel and tourism industry that there is a lot more to Nevada as a destination than gaming and shows. PTI
