Taliban, opposition fight for holdout province

Top US general warns of civil war if Taliban fails to consolidate power

REUTERS
September 5

TALIBAN AND OPPOSITION forces battled on Saturday to control the Panjshir Valley north of Kabul, the last Afghan province holding out against the militant group, as the top US general warned of a "civil war" if the Islamists failed to consolidate power.

Both sides claimed to have the upper hand in Panjshir, but neither could produce conclusive evidence. The Taliban, which swept through the country ahead of the final withdrawal of US-led forces this week, were unable to control the valley when they ruled Afghanistan from 1996 to 2001.

Taliban spokesman Bilal Karimi said the districts of Khinj and Unabah had been taken, giving Taliban forces control of four of the province's seven districts. "The Mujahideen (Taliban fighters) are advancing toward the centre (of the province)," he said on Twitter.

But the National Resistance Front of Afghanistan, grouping forces loyal to local leader Ahmad Massoud, said it surrounded "thousands of terrorists" in Khawak pass and the Taliban had abandoned vehicles and equipment in the Dashte Rewak area. Front spokesman Fahim Dashti added "heavy clashes" were going on. In a Facebook post, Massoud insisted Panjshir "continues to stand strongly". Praising "our honourable sisters", he said demonstrations by women in the western city of Herat calling for their rights showed Afghans had not given up demands for justice and "they fear no threats".

US General Mark Milley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, underscored the tenuous situation. "My military estimate is, is that the conditions are likely to develop of a civil war. I don't know if the Taliban is going to be able to consolidate power and establish governance," Milley said.

Speaking to Fox News from Ramstein Air Base in Germany, Milley said if they cannot that will "lead to a reconstitution of Al Qaeda or a growth of ISIS or other myriad terrorist groups" over the next three years.

Emergency, an Italian medical aid organisation, said Taliban forces had pushed further into the Panjshir Valley on Friday night, reaching the village of Anabah where the group has medical facilities. "We have received a small number of wounded people at the Anabah Surgical Centre," Emergency said in a statement, adding that many people fled in recent days.

It was not immediately possible to get further independent confirmation of events in Panjshir, which is walled off by mountains except for a narrow entrance.

Celebratory gunfire resounded in Kabul on Friday as reports spread of the Taliban's takeover of Panjshir. News agencies said at least 17 people were killed and 41 hurt.

Pakistan's spy chief Lieutenant General Faiz Hameed flew into Kabul on Saturday. It was not clear what his agenda was, but a senior official in Pakistan said earlier in the week that Hameed, who heads ISI, could help the Taliban reorganise the Afghan military.

Washington has accused Pakistan and the ISI of backing the Taliban in its fight against Afghan government, although Islamabad has denied this.

US lawmaker urges Blinken to clear pvt flights for evacuation

REUTERS
Washington, September 5

US REPRESENTATIVE MIKE Waltz has called on the State Department to work with non-governmental organisations that he said are trying to clear charter flights to evacuate Americans and at-risk allies still hiding in Afghan cities.

In a letter to Secretary of State Antony Blinken on Saturday, the Republican lawmaker and former White House official said he had been told by several NGOs that there were manifested charter flights "available, funded, and ready to fly" people out. Groups of American citizens, legal permanent residents, and Afghans eligible for special visas were hiding near airports waiting for clearance to depart the country, Waltz, a decorated veteran, said.

UAE rolls out plan to invest in economy, liberalise laws

ISABEL DEBRE
Dubai, September 5

THE UNITED ARAB Emirates (UAE) announced on Sunday a major plan to stimulate its economy and liberalise stringent residency rules for foreigners, as it seeks to overhaul its finances and attract visitors and investment.

The nation's plan to lure foreign talent over the next decades reflects an emerging contrast with the other sheikhdoms of the Persian Gulf that are growing increasingly protectionist as they try to diversify their oil-bound economies.

Now marking its 50th anniversary, the UAE is seeking to accelerate its economic and social reforms to rebrand for a post-pandemic future. Portraying the country as a liberal, bustling trade and finance hub, the government promised to pour $13.6 billion into the economy in the next year and $150 billion by 2030.

Specific projects have yet to be announced, but $1.36 billion has been earmarked for the Emirates Development Bank to support the industrial sector.

"We are building the new 50 years' economy," Abdulla bin Touq, the economy minister, said in an interview, adding that free trade and openness have long made

A presenter walks off stage at an event announcing new economic programmes for the UAE in Dubai on Sunday

UAE a major global entrepot. "Anyone who is trying to be more conservative and trying to close their markets, the value is going to be only in the short term, but in the long term, they're harming their economies."

Friction has grown between the UAE and its heavyweight neighbour Saudi Arabia, which has taken a different strategy under the young and brash Crown Prince Mohammed bin Salman.

Buried within the raft of the UAE's flashy economic development initiatives on Sunday was a far more practical — and drastic — change to the country's visa system that governs the legions of foreign workers from Africa, West Asia and elsewhere who power the country's economy.

Since the UAE's independence, the state has tied employment to residency status, lending employers outsized power and forcing people to immediately leave the country once they lost their jobs.

"We want to rebuild the whole system ... so that the residency system is attracting people and making sure they feel the UAE is home for them," bin Touq said. "Openness is something which we're proud of."

The new plans give residents an additional three months to seek other jobs after being fired, allow parents to sponsor their children's visas until the age of 25, and ease visa restrictions on freelancers, widows and divorced people, among other things. It's a subtle shift from the Gulf Arab state's traditional way of treating its vast foreign labour force as an expendable underclass. — AP

Govt to extend incentive scheme for leather, footwear industry

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
New Delhi, September 5

THE GOVERNMENT IS likely to extend an incentive scheme for leather and footwear industries, IFLADP, till 2025-26 with an outlay of ₹1,700 crore, to further boost manufacturing, exports and job creation, an official said.

The commerce and industry ministry has submitted a proposal for the implementation of the Indian Footwear Leather and Accessories Development Programme (IFLADP) with an outlay of ₹1,700 crore, to be incurred during 2021-22 to 2025-26, the official said.

The Union Cabinet might approve it soon, the official added.

The programme has six components — Sustainable Technology and Environmental Promotion (proposed outlay ₹500 crore); Integrated Development of Leather Sector (proposed outlay ₹500 crore); Establishment of Institutional Facilities (₹200 crore); Mega Leather Footwear and Accessories Cluster Development (₹300 crore); Brand Promotion of Indian Brands in Leather and Footwear Sector (₹100 crore); and Development of Design Studios (₹100 crore).

The expenditure finance committee, under the finance ministry, has already approved the commerce ministry's proposal, the official added.

Under the 'Sustainable Technology and Environmental Promotion' component, assistance could be provided for setting up a common effluent treatment plant; and support could be extended for modernisation/ capacity expansion/ technology up-gradation under the 'Integrated Development of Leather Sector' component.

Similarly, under the 'Establishment of Institutional Facilities' component, support could be provided for the setting up of new infrastructure and up-gradation of requisite infra of the existing campuses of Footwear Design and Development Institute (FDDI).
