Faceless scrutiny; taxpayers benefit, but bugs need fixing

AHMEDABAD: A year after faceless assessment of income tax (IT) returns was implemented, people's time has been saved and hassles reduced, but the system needs to get rid of a few technical glitches.

Moreover, experts say, taxpayers sometimes experience difficulty in uploading appeals and the video-conferencing facility is at times erratic. A series of representations have been made to the IT department seeking prompt resolutions of these concerns.

"Faceless assessment has certainly improved tax compliance and made the process easy. However, certain aberrations remain," said Mukesh Patel, an Ahmedabad-based tax expert. "For instance, the provision for hearing exists but it is left to the discretion of IT department officials." Patel added: "This is an unfair proposition in the scheme itself, not just for assessment but for appeal too, which must be corrected." Varis Isani, a tax advocate, said: "A number of technical challenges such as glitches on the e-filing website remain." Isani added: "Over the past two months, uploading appeals has been difficult due to some technical glitch on the website. Moreover, the video-conferencing facility is often not available." In fact, following a slew of representations related to the faceless system, a grievance redressal system was introduced only last week for assessment, appeal, and penalty matters.

After the tax reform was introduced on August 13, 2020, some 1.06 lakh faceless assessment orders have been passed as on April 21 across India. Estimates by the IT department in Gujarat suggest that at least 5% of these orders (roughly 1,000) were issued to taxpayers in Gujarat. With faceless assessment, there is higher dependence on big data analytics and artificial intelligence to identify cases for scrutiny.

Tax practitioners said that a number of assessment orders have been framed in violation of the prescribed norms.

"A taxpayer has the right to seek a hearing and cannot be compelled to go for an appeal straight up," said Naik Mehta, a chartered accountant. "This needs to be rectified in the current faceless assessment system."

Six trapped inside chimney of factory in Ranavav

RAJKOT: At least six labourers were trapped inside the chimney of a cement factory in Ranavav of Porbandar on Thursday after the scaffolding they were standing on collapsed. Rescue operations by teams of the Indian Coast Guard and the local fire brigade was on till late on Thursday night. According to sources, the incident occurred when the labourers were working inside the chimney at the height of 45-foot doing painting work inside.

A scaffolding made out of iron pipes was erected inside the chimney for this purpose.

However, the scaffolding collapsed due to some unknown reasons and six labourers fell down from the height of at least 40 feet," said Porbandar district collector AM Sharma.

The fire brigade and Indian Coast Guard teams are engaged in rescue work.
