Commendatory as Recommendatory

This refers to the Edit, 'Recommendations Are for the Taking' (May 23). The Supreme Court was right in its verdict that the recommendations of the GST Council are non-binding. The suggestions of the Interstate Council, a constitutional body too are recommendatory. Logically the decision of a council dealing with the Centre-state relations must be recommendatory to avoid forceful passing of a resolution that would put the minority state governments at a disadvantage. In a healthy federal system, the minority-ruled states must have equal say in the decision-making that involves matters of public interest, just like every US state has equal representation irrespective of population and area.

Once Bot, They Needn't Stay Bot

Apropos 'Let Them Have Cake Inscriptions!' (Just In Jest, May 23), since the bots are not fully evolved, they cannot comprehend the emotions and intent behind the human form of communication. As a result, bot blunders are rampant today. They need to adapt and quickly get to a stage where they can understand the message correctly, ask questions if they don't, seek clarifications if required, and finally deliver the perfect form. Who knows, a completely evolved bot in the future may even be able to correct human communication errors that seem so widespread today. Now, that will be like having the cake and eating it too.
