Satellite technology to keep vigil on ship movements

ARUNKUMAR HURALIMATH

@ Karwar

TO keep an eye on the movement of ships near Karwar coast, Vessel Traffic Movement System (VTMS) will come up at Karwar Commercial Port. This will help in tracking movement of vessels up to 40 km range off the coast.

VTMS is a technology in which satellites keep an eye on ship movement and transfer data to a local office in Karwar. This technology will help to track all ships, including the ones deployed for fishing. Even if any ship sinks in the sea and encounters any mishap, the satellite will alert the office and the port officials and others can swing into action.

Arun Gaonkar, Karwar Port

officer said that to strengthen security at ports, its nearby areas, and for the safety of ship movement, directorate general of shipping has come up with a plan to construct VTMS at Karwar. Once it starts functioning, each and every ship will be under the observation of the satellite.

"As of now, we can track ships upto 10 km range with the available technology. With VTMS, direction of ships can also be tracked. This will help to control vessel traffic with longer range," he added.

To set up VTMS, a small building will be constructed near the port where the whole system will be set up in G+1 building. For the project, the Directorate General of Shipping will share half of the cost and the remaining will be borne by the government.

In the last few months, ship movement also increased in the port and it is a challenge to handle traffic and also provide security to the port. For the security. CCTV cameras are installed in each nook and corner. With the night navigation technology, ships can be seen entering the port around the clock.

The port authorities have decided to recruit 15 ex-army men and they will be laced with arms to provide security to the port round the clock. As of now, Home Guards and police are offering a security cover to the port, which is not enough for the increasing activities. Therefore, the department will recruit ex-army men for better security to the port, the officer said, and added that tender has been floated to recruit a required number of security personnel.

HIT BY WILD ANIMALS PUTTUR FARMER TO GIVE UP PADDY CULTIVATION

DIVYA CUTINHA @ Mangaluru

SOME of the farmers in Puttur and Uppinangady this year have decided not to cultivate paddy due to peacock, monkey and wild boar menace.

Paddy cultivators are struggling to keep the birds and wild animals at bay. They stray in large numbers into paddy fields, completely damaging the crops.

The farmers plagued by the wild boar menace have decided to stop cultivation this year.

Prasad Shetty, a farmer from Puttur whose crops were destroyed last year speaking to TNIE said: "Last year the full harvest was destroyed due to wild boar and peacock straying into our fields. Labourers too refuse to cut dry straw destroyed by the wild animals and eventually we had to clear the fields."

Most farmers used to cultivate paddy for household needs, in addition to getting dry straw for dairy animals. However, due to rise in wild animal menace, as many as 15 farmers with 25 acres of land have stopped paddy cultivation in Puttur Taluk.

In addition, paddy cultivators are also having sleepless nights due to snails, which are destroying the paddy sprouts. Farmers who are most affected by the birds and wild animal menace have switched to arecanut and banana cultivation that they say is more profitable than paddy.

Uppinangady Range Forest Officer Sandhya speaking to TNIE said that though there is a rise in the number of complaints regarding elephant attacks, farmers have not yet lodged any complaint regarding wild boar menace. "Those affected can approach the forest department and avail compensation," he said, adding that there is no financial aid for birds and monkey menace. Since most of the farmers have stopped paddy cultivation, dairy farmers are now facing shortage of dry straw and only depend on green fodder.

Roopesh Rai, convenor of district Farmers Association

Last year, a full harvest was destroyed due to wild boar and peacock straying into our fields. Labourers too refuse to cut dry straw destroyed by the wild animals and eventually we had to clear the fields.

Prasad Shetty, Farmer, Puttur said that though the state government has started giving subsidy of ₹7,000 per hectare, the farmers cultivating paddy face multiple problems.

"This year, the process of sowing seeds is yet to begin due to insufficient water following a delayed monsoon. In addition, there are no takers for the produce. The government must come forward to purchase our rice for Anna Bhagya scheme," he said.

Branches of trees causing threat to people should be cut down: Official

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @Belagavi

TOP officials from Forest, HESCOM and City Corporation will hold a meeting in Belagavi on Tuesday with regard to cutting of trees and its branches posing a threat to people and vehicular traffic at many places in the city.

A large number of such trees and branches are identified in the city and are expected to be cropped before they create more damage in the upcoming monsoon.

Dr Vishal, who was transferred from Belagavi recently as Deputy Commissioner directed officials of all three departments to get the trees and its branches cut if they posed a threat before the onset of monsoon.

However, due to various reasons, the work could not be taken up even as monsoon arrived in Belagavi city.

During a survey, HESCOM officials identified 218 trees as dangerous in Belagavi North region and 139 in Belagavi South a few days ago. A letter also has been written to the Forest Department by HESCOM on the trees and branches that were needed to be cut to ensure safety to the people.

It may be recalled that several trees had fallen on electricity wires in different parts of the city following heavy rainfall in the third week of April. The fall of trees due to gusty winds had forced HESCOM to cut power supply in the entire city for some hours.

Several local organisations and leaders appealed to Deputy Commissioner S B Bommanahalli and officials of all departments concerned to cut the trees which posed danger before the monsoon gained pace.
