Big relief for households as edible oils get cheaper

SHUBHRA TANDON & SANDIP DAS
New Delhi, July 22:

THE PRICES OF edible oil have corrected sharply in June compared to May, with maximum decline of 18.1% coming in palm oil prices. The other categories — sunflower, soyabean, groundnut, mustard and vanaspati have also seen correction in the range of 1-7% in the last one month, according to data sourced from Bizom.

Apart from easing, the end consumer's household budget where edible oil forms a key commodity, packaged food companies are also likely to be key beneficiaries as it eases their costs and pressure on margins.

Manish Aggarwal, director, Bikano, Bikanervala Foods, said: "The last few weeks has seen prices of a few key commodities such as palm oil tumble, which is good news for the FMCG players and industry, as we can hope for better bottom line this quarter."

Krishna Mohan Nyayapati, director, Emami Agrotech, said that the company has revised the consumer prices on different oils in the range of Rs 15-30 a litre in the last two months. "In our expectation we are close to the bottom, but there would be some more downward corrections that would happen in the next 30 days. However, we are in a wait and watch mode as the oil prices are so volatile and difficult to predict under the current scenario," he said.

According to trade data, landed prices of palm oil, which has a share of more than 56% in India's import basket, fell by more than 31% to $1,080 a tonne on Thursday, from the level a month ago.

Similarly, soyabean and sunflower oil prices have declined by 19% and 22%, respectively, to $1,390/tonne and $1,550/tonne, respectively, in the last one month.

Airport logjams, delay at ports: Hot summer for Europe travellers

PRANAV MUKUL
New Delhi, July 22

AS THE PEAK summer travel season sets in, destinations in Europe are bracing for an unanticipated travel load with both airlines and airport operators facing off to manage the traffic. While ports and airports are alerting passengers of potential delays in their travel plans, airlines are beginning to cancel flights at key destinations.

The issue came in the spotlight after the public fight between London Heathrow Airport and Dubai-based airline Emirates, where the airport operator

File photo of travellers at Heathrow airport in London. Heathrow Airport has introduced a cap on passenger numbers this summer as the aviation sector struggles to cope luggage is not being loaded into aircraft on time, and several flights are departing without carrying their passengers' luggage.

Additionally, airports are witnessing long queues, causing passengers to miss their flights. Further, as per a Reuters report, the Port of Dover — UK's gateway to Europe — on Friday declared a "critical incident" over long delays, blaming French authorities for causing a bottleneck as holidaymakers look to start their summer breaks. Ferry operators warned passengers travelling to Calais of facing delays of up to four hours at the start of what is typically one of the busiest periods of travel as schools break up for their summer holiday.

Emirates-Heathrow issue

On July 14, Emirates issued a strongly-worded statement rejecting London Heathrow's demands for cutting airline capacity. "At London Heathrow airport (LHR), our ground handling and catering — run by dnata, part of the Emirates Group — are fully ready and capable of handling our flights.

So the crux of the issue lies with the central services and systems which are the responsibility of the airport operator... LHR chose not to act, not to plan, not to invest. Now faced with an "airmageddon" situation due to their incompetence and non-action, they are pushing the entire burden — of costs and the scramble to sort the mess — to airlines and travellers," the airline said in its statement.

However, a day later, Emirates and London Heathrow (LHR) issued a joint statement announcing having arrived at an agreement, where Emirates agreed cap sales on its flights out of Heathrow until mid-August as it works "to adjust capacity".

Meta tweaks Facebook app to act like TikTok

KURT WAGNER & ALEX BARINKA
July 22

FACEBOOK PARENT Meta Platforms is changing the way it shows users posts and videos on its flagship social network, part of an effort to get people to watch content from accounts they don't already follow and better compete with the video app TikTok.

The main feed on Facebook will now be called "Home," and will be a place for people to "discover new content" that Facebook thinks that they'll like, according to a company blog post. That includes photos and videos selected by software algorithms, which will surface content based on users' interests, from both accounts they follow and those they don't.

The changes started Thursday, but the majority of the content will still come from accounts users follow, a Meta spokeswoman said. The company plans to increase the new content it shows over time as it improves the recommendation algorithm.

A new tab, called "Feeds," will exclusively show posts from friends, family, pages and groups that a person has chosen to follow, with the most recent content at the top. "Your Home tab is uniquely personalized to you," the company explained in its blog. "This system takes into account thousands of signals to help cut through the clutter and rank content in the order we think you will find most valuable."

Facebook's user growth has stalled in recent years in the US and Europe. Competitor TikTok, known for its younger audience, has seen significant growth in its number of users and time spent on the app in the US. In turn, Facebook has been working to attract young people — a group that Meta chief executive officer Mark Zuckerberg has called the company's "north star."

TikTok, whose main feed is called the "For You" page, serves up short-form videos to users with help from its algorithm that discerns their likes and dislikes from their activity on the platform. Most often these videos are from accounts that users don't directly follow, but whose content aligns with their interests.

This personalized approach has helped catapult TikTok to 1 billion monthly users in just four years. While TikTok only has about a third of Facebook's 2.9 billion users, the average US TikTok user spends 29 hours a month on the app, almost double Facebook's 16 hours, according to mobile researcher Data.ai.

Zuckerberg has acknowledged TikTok's success in recent earnings calls, and has been pushing his own version of TikTok's short-form videos, called Reels, aggressively on both Facebook and Instagram. Part of Meta's strategy has also involved attracting creators to make quality videos that originate on Reels. One aim of the new feed will be to keep Facebook users on the app longer by adding more original content and a broader range of accounts.

Every video that someone posts to Instagram that's less than 15 minutes long will be automatically branded a Reel. —BLOOMBERG

Problem at Europe's airports

When the Covid-19 pandemic emerged two years ago and the aviation industry got hit severely, airlines and airports handed pink slips to workers to reduce costs as flights remained grounded for a long time. However, with Covid slowly receding, people have started travelling and airlines have started boarding flights; but staff at airports weren't hired in line with the growing traffic. This, in addition to several airport and security worker unions at European airports going on a strike seeking better pay, has led to a severe shortage of labour causing disruptions in flight operations.

Affected destinations

These issues have emerged at some of the top European airport hubs, including Heathrow in London, Amsterdam's Schiphol, Brussels airport, Frankfurt airport, and several others. The most visible problem is that of delayed baggage. As a result of labour shortage, passenger
