Mahindra revvs up to make up for lost time in EV race

Automaker takes bold plunge into future of premium EVs, to launch at least 6 eSUVs in the next 5 years or a company that missed making a bigger splash in the passenger BEV (battery electric vehicle) space earlier despite acquiring the Reva Electric Company (one of the pioneers in the EV space globally), Mahindra & Mahindra has put in place a massive catch-up and overtake plan. The SUV maker has just launched two brands that will have dedicated BEVs in their portfolio.

One will simply be called BE and the other will be the XUV brand that is currently extremely popular and is being used for its ICE (internal combustion engine) vehicles.

The company has developed an all-new, built from scratch, inhouse BEV platform called 'INGLO', which will be the basis for several new EVs that will be commercially launched starting late 2024. The platform type is the now popular skateboard platform that has become the choice of a lot of brands going electric.

Mahindra says the difference is that INGLO is a lightweight skateboard that helps in lowering vehicle weight and enables better packaging of the battery. Unlike the current bodyon-frame SUVs that dominate Mahindra's portfolio. the skateboard platform is ideal for EVs; they tend to modular and safer within the context of electrics. Mahindra has also signed a contract with Volkswagen for sourcing BEV components, including battery cells that the German auto major currently manufactures for its vehicles and that form part of the latter's MEB plat-

Volkswagen's modular electric platform (MEB) components including the electric drivetrain, the battery system and battery cell are part of the sourcing contract. The plan according to Mahindra officials, is to localise manufacture of these sourced components so that the costs can be kept low.

Mahindra officials also tell me that at least three of the eSUV prototypes that you see in these pictures are nearly 95-97 per cent production ready, and even in terms of design there will only be very few changes. Mahindra will also be looking to set up a greenfield manufacturing plant for assembling the new BEVs. Currently, the company is scouting for a location for the new plant. Company officials say that it could simply be a factor of which state government offers the most subsidies for setting up the facility.

Electric features

The new Mahindra electric vehicles are expected to feature LFP cells (lithium ferro phosphate) which offer higher energy density compared to the more common lithium-ion cells. Mahindra officials say that it will also follow a common battery pack design with lean modules and standardised cellto-pack technology using two different cell architectures - Blade and Prismatic.

The new eSUVs will be offered with battery pack options ranging from 6080 kWhr capacity, and the charging system will be protected for an incredible 175 kW fast-charge and be capable of charging up to 80 per cent in less than 30

Mahindra officials mention that the idea is to offer a sizeable battery pack to reduce range anxiety. However, this also means that the vehicles are unlikely to be priced in the lower end of the spectrum. However, eSUVs built on adapted platforms like the upcoming XUV 400 could fill the gap below the Rs 20 lakh

The powertrain is expected to include a compact all-in-one electric engine with motor-inverter-transmission integrated into a single unit. The vehicles will be offered with both rear-wheel and all-wheel drive options, developing as much as 170-210 kW and a whopping 250-290 kW respectively.

The electric powertrains have already been tested extensively, and Mahindra claims that a standstill to 100 kmph acceleration can be achieved in between 5 and 6 seconds. Mahindra engineering team also says that the new eSUVs will have high levels of safety built into them starting with the structural integrity and quality of materials used. The frontal design of the Body-In-White for IN-GLO platform vehicles will be enhanced with three load paths and a multi-piece dash panel with reinforcement. Excellent battery protection will also be ensured by using ultra-high strength boron steel.

The new e-SUVs are expec-

'Operational intensity, compliance costs will go up for digital lenders'

RBI's new norms will impact 'buy now, pay later' services, prepaid instruments: CRISIL

The digital lending norms announced by the Reserve Bank of India (RBI) on August 10 will raise operational intensity and compliance costs for lenders in the near term, according to CRISIL Ratings. The norms will impact the 'buy now, pay later' services and prepaid instruments being offered.

Referring to a clause that requires all-inclusive costs to be highlighted upfront in the form of annual percentage rates, the agency said this could impact the incremental business for some players, as borrowers now would be able to see the total annual costs imposed on them and compare them effectively with other alternatives.

The agency noted that digital lenders have built their entire customer journey via technology-enabled means, including credit underwriting using alternative data sources and artificial intelligence. Some of the rules that kick in with immediate effect will have a major Krishnan Sitaraman, Senior Director and Deputy Chief Ratings Officer, CRISIL Ratings, said: "The regulations on direct transfer of disbursements/repayments between borrowers and lenders will impact the 'buy now, pay later' services and prepaid instruments being offered. Business models will have to be tweaked to conform with the new regulations."

"Another important change is the restriction imposed on scrubbing/ reading the smartphones of borrowers. This was a typical part of the underwriting regimen for digital consumer loans, and it will have to be rejigged now." The norms aim to usher in orderly

While, overall, the revised norms are expected to enhance levels of corporate governance, transparency and disclosure, clarifications on the use first-loss default guarantees, which are still under further examination, bear watching, said CRISIL in a statement. This aspect is an important feature of the business models for some of the digital lenders today. As some of the NBFCs align themselves with the changing regulations, any major disruption in business operations will be a key monitorable.

Nevertheless, the credit profiles of CRISIL-rated entities operating in this space and rated in the investment grade, continue to be supported by maintenance of equity capital

Flow of credit The new regulatory framework centred around the digital lending ecosystem of regulated entities and lending service providers (LSPs) engaged by them to extend various permissible credit facilitation services directs that all loan disbursements and repayments must strictly flow between the bank accounts of borrower and lender without any passthrough to the account of LSP or third parties.

Regulatory uncertainty In June, the RBI barred prepaid payments instruments, including cards and wallets, from extending credit lines to customers, and said that all loan disbursements and repayments must be carried out between the bank accounts of the borrowers and regulated lenders.

Uni Cards today said that while the cards are inactive customers can still access their 'Uni Cash', and that the company has extended the zerocharge limit on Uni Cash till September 21 to meet their emergency and everyday cash requirements.

In a separate press statement, Uni Cards said it had taken a call to pause onboarding in the light of the RBI guidelines released on June 20.

"With the recent RBI notification around digital lending, we have decided to proactively suspend card services on our products — the Uni Pay 1/3rd Card and the Uni Pay 1/2 Card. This process will begin in phases for our customers starting today and will be concluded by Monday, August 22," said the company. Reports suggest that Slice and
