Prime Video rolls out sports offering with FanCode

GEETIKA SRIVASTAVA
New Delhi, November 16

AMAZON PRIME VIDEO, the subscription video-on-demand streaming and rental service, has collaborated with video streaming platform FanCode to launch its first dedicated sports channel in India. Through the partnership, the platform will provide access to more than 15 global and domestic sports such as cricket, football, rugby, kabaddi, basketball, and horse racing to viewers in the country. The channel will be available at an introductory offer price of ₹249. Prime members can purchase an annual add-on subscription to access it.

Prime Video said that it aims to provide a single destination for customers to access a range of premium content from multiple video streaming services. Vivek Srivastava, head, Prime Video Channels, Prime Video, India, said, "While our entertainment preferences are delightfully diverse across the country, we are all ardent sports fans. All forms of sports have such strong, passionate fan following and we would like to make access to a diverse array of sports easy."

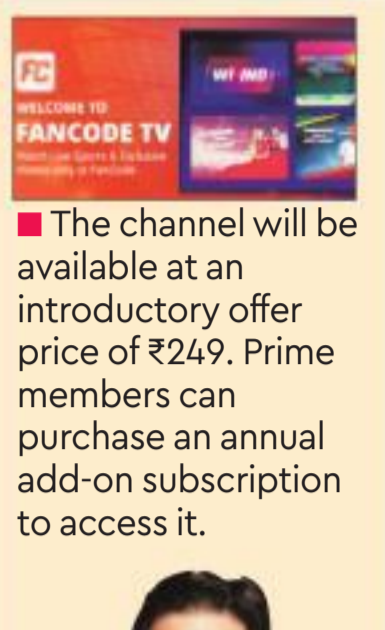

This partnership comes at a time when competition for online cricket streaming rights has heated up. Disney+Hotstar is streaming the World Cup for free with features such as AI-based video clarity and a live feed with player stats. Jio Cinema's penetration has jumped 4X on the back of free IPL streaming earlier this year.

FanCode has streamed more than 45,000 hours of live sports content in the four years since its inception. It also serves as a sports-related online marketplace. Yannick Colaco, co-founder, FanCode, said, "FanCode wants to reach every sports fan across the country and this association with Prime Video is a step in that direction."

VIVEK SRIVASTAVA,
Head of Prime Video Channels,
Prime Video India

All forms of sports have such strong and passionate fan following and we would like to make access to a diverse array of sports easy.

Some of FanCode's exclusive rights and partnerships include ICC Pathways, Cricket West Indies, EFL, CONMEBOL, Volleyball World & FIBA. Subscribers can also watch tournaments such as the Carabao Cup, Women's Big Bash League, FIFA U17 World Cup, Barclays Women's Super League, AFC Champions League, AFC Cup, and Yuva Kabaddi, among others. In addition to these, subscribers will also get access to the Super Smash and England tour of the West Indies later in the year, the company stated in a release.

The content partnership will help both these platforms leverage each other's user base, said Karan Taurani, senior vice-president at Elara Capital. "In India, IPL has cornered almost 70% in terms of ad spends on sports. If you add international matches and bilateral games, this number comes close to 93-94%. All these rights have recently been renewed and are with platforms such as Jio Cinema, Viacom, Zee, and Disney Hotstar. Prime Video and FanCode might not be able to offer any big-ticket content to the Indian cricket audience," added Taurani. Given that, Taurani said, the duo must work to build up the non-cricket sports franchise. It could also explore sub-letting/sub-franchising its content for an international audience.

One thing going for FanCode is its unbundled, sachet offerings wherein viewers can subscribe and watch any one particular tournament/match for a nominal amount. This means subscribers can independently buy standalone tournaments on the FanCode platform, experts said. Currently, among the OTT operators in India, Disney+ Hotstar dominates the subscription market with over 40 million subscribers, despite its loss of over 1.2 million subscribers in the June 2023 quarter. In comparison, Amazon Prime Video has 20 million and Netflix has 6.5 million subscribers.

The sleeper hit this World Cup: A simple, informal show from Pak

SANDEEP DWIVEDI
New Delhi, November 16

FOUR FORMER PAKISTAN captains, one of them a living legend, an endearing anchor, a rudimentary set, no complicated data-crunching, no over-philosophising analysis, no raised voices and no hero-worship. This World Cup, a no-frills, rich-in-content talkshow featuring cricket's renowned pundits from Pakistan — Wasim Akram, Moin Khan, Misbah-ul-Haq, Shoaib Malik — along with a pleasant presenter, Fakhr-e-Alam, with an entertainment background, has cut through the clutter and proved to be a sleeper hit.

The Pavilion, a flagship free-streaming show of A Sports, part of Pakistan's largest media network ARY, is fast approaching the 1000K subscriber mark with most of its hour-long video capsules securing close to one million views. Among the lakhs of Indians following the show are former India captains Kapil Dev and Sourav Ganguly, who have publicly applauded the efforts of their one-time rivals.

The chief architect of The Pavilion says the show's unique free-flowing conversational format reflects their trust in the good old tradition of storytelling and their wish to sound different in the general cricket broadcasting din.

"What we have managed to achieve with The Pavilion is a function of not trying to over-complicate things. We keep it simple, we tell stories, and we try to discuss matches the way one would discuss them sitting in their lounge with their friends and family," ARY Digital Founder and CEO Salman Iqbal shares with The Indian Express. Giving the uncomplicated show the feel of a lounge full of family and friends is the chemistry between the five men on the screen. Akram, Moin, Misbah and Malik go back a long way. On the show, the stalwarts wear their intellect lightly, they come across as warm, cheerful and quippy friends enjoying a game of cricket. With years of experience behind them, they catch the nuance of the game and discuss it threadbare. Showing succinct and self-deprecating wit, they crack jokes and pull each other's legs. They drop their guard and be themselves. Akram shares his trade secret with The Indian Express — being original always works. "I have been doing this for 20 years now and eventually, it is simple math -- be true and add natural humor where you can. One has to be original. Basically, just be yourself," he says. In the mostly Urdu-English show, Akram often switches to Punjabi, mostly when he is annoyed. After Pakistan's loss

A repeat of 2003: India, Australia in final

AUSTRALIA OVERCAME A spirited challenge from South Africa by three wickets in the second semifinal of the World Cup on Thursday to set up a title clash with hosts India. The final will be played on Sunday at Ahmedabad. The two teams had last clashed in the final of a World Cup back in 2003, which Australia had won.

David Miller struck a 116-ball 101 and lifted South Africa to 212 all out after his team had lost four early wickets.

In reply, Australia stuttered before completing the chase of 213 with 16 balls to spare as South Africa choked yet again on the big stage. Travis Head blazed away to 62 off 48 balls while David Warner smashed 29 off 18 in an opening stand of 60 to lay the foundation for Australia's chase.

Earlier, Miller hit eight fours and five sixes during his rescue act, and brought up his century with a maximum over deep midwicket off Australian captain Pat Cummins.

Opting to bat after winning the toss, South Africa were off to a disastrous start losing both their openers Quinton de Kock and Temba Bavuma with just eight runs on the board in the sixth over. — PTI to India, he came down heavily on South African coach Mickey Arthur. On the issue of foreign coaches demanding assistants from abroad, Akram lets it fly. "Shaam ko in logon nu galaan bhi kadhni hoti hain na (They hire assistants from their country since they have to shoot the breeze in the evenings)." The ever-smiling Malik says Rohit Sharma's all-out attack on the Pakistan bowling unit reminds him of his "Arabi teacher." "He would spare no one in our class. Same is true with Rohit, he is equally harsh on all the bowlers," he says. Malik keeps his cricketing analysis easy. Within hours of the heavily cramping Aussie all-rounder Glenn Maxwell playing the inning of his life, the Pakistan all-rounder was ready with an explainer.

He takes a bat in the hand and imitates Maxwell's swing and compares it with a golfer teeing off. Suddenly, for a lay fan, everything fell in place. The Aussie, a regular on the green, had awakened the inner cricket and train together. Before the semis, they all went scuba-diving. When on air, they coax each other to repeat lines and acts that had triggered laughs in the green room. Akram pulls his tongue out like a snake, to depict a Pakistan actor known for his role as a deadly "naag". Moin provides the hissing noise in the background. Shoaib and Fakhrare in splits. In the "ask the expert" section, a fan wants to know if Misbah colours his flowing jet-black beard. "Meri daadhi, meri dye, tainu ki (My beard, my dye, what's your problem)," he says. More laughs.

With close to 200 million overall views for their show and critical acclaim pouring from around the world, at The Pavilion they are having their cake and eating it too.

Eyedrops made for Walmart, Target recalled

KILITCH HEALTHCARE INDIA recalled 27 types of eyedrops sold in US stores nationwide because they may be unsafe, US regulators said.

The Food and Drug Administration warned consumers last month not to purchase or use store-brand eyedrops from Walmart, CVS Health, Target and other companies "due to risk of eye infection," without naming Kilitch as the manufacturer. Bloomberg reported November 10 that Kilitch made the eyedrops in an unsanitary factory in India where some workers went barefoot and others fabricated test results that gave the appearance of prodfilling in backdated test results that purported to show batches of eyedrops were sterile. Samples taken during the inspection revealed bacterial contamination in filling areas where the eyedrops were bottled. The FDA asked Kilitch to recall its products on October 25 but the company hadn't done so until now.
