Maharashtra govt plans graded relaxation in curbs

The Maharashtra government on Thursday said lockdown-like curbs would be relaxed in districts in a graded manner, based on case positivity rate, adding a policy would soon be formed on the issue.

The government issued a statement to clear the air after television channels reported about lifting of all restrictions in 18 districts.

Under the proposed norms, districts would be classified on five levels based would be classified on five levels based on weekly case positivity rate and occu-pancy of oxygenated beds in hospitals. The existing restrictions would be relaxed or made more stringent based on these parameters, the state government said. The state's disaster management authority met on Thursday to discuss the proposal. After the meeting, Relief and Rehabilitation Minister Vijay Wadettiwar told the media that existing restrictions.

Their purpose, according to Carney's report, was to create a wide and diverse web of companies across the Jew-ellery value chain to present what would appear to be a fully-integrated jewellery conglomerate. The real function, however, was to allegedly hoodwink customers. An example is a company called Independent Gemological Laboratories, purportedly an independent jewellery grading laboratory, which was in fact owned 99/99 per cent by Choksi and 0.01 per cent by this associate and co-conspirator. It was alleged to be passing off lab-grown diamonds as mined ones.

The Central Bureau of mined ones

The Central Bureau of Investigation (CBD) and the Enforcement Directorate (ED) alleged that Choksi or his associates formed several entitles across countries to circulate money and inventory whilst concealing their connection and thus rendering them "puppet vendors" (see box). These were represented as independent third parties, when in reality they were entities owned or controlled by Choksi, Glarigali, or employees of Choksia, according to The Central Bureau of ties owned or controlled by Choksi, Glanjali, or employees of Choksi, according to Carney's report, and served to circulate money and inventory among Samules and related entities—in short, laundering the money. According to Merchant, it was always fame and fortune Choksi coveted. "If I have to point out a single most promi-nent trait of his, I would say it nent trait of his, I would say it was the deep-seared compul-sive obsession to prove himself to others." says Merchant, adding, "This, backed by his exceptionally high nervous energy, which clearly differentiated him from the rest of us. His quest was to do something big, something dramatic."

Given how everything has bly something dramatic. Often how everything has played out, Choksi, now 62, achieved all that but for all the wrong reasons. The other facet that those who know him point out is that there are no mistakes when it comes to planning his future and next moves. As he faces trial in Dominica, it's likely that he might still have a trick or two up his sleeve. That is, unless the law has well and truly run him into a blind alley – this time with no escape route.

Pappu's role models. Even after Bharat Shah's imprisonment, Pappu remained in awe of him, Merchant says. Choksi even went and bought a yacht once simply because Mallya had one.

And so Choksi grew his empire with a mix of retail outlets, big-ticket advertising (2200-plus crore annual budgets) and long-term endorsements from big Bollywood names such as Katrina Kaif, Bipasha Basu and Kangana Ranaut (some of whom also accused him of breach of contract), thus expanding his market cap and presence. Then in 2013, with the change in gold loan credit facilities extended to jewellers by banks, Gitanjal's working capital got to jewellers by banks, Gitanjali's working capital got squeezed and the business fal-tered. There was also an insid-ter trading investigation against him that didn't help matters. Finally, in 2018, PNB lodged a complaint with Indian author-

Finally, in 2018, PNB lodged a complaint with Indian authorities against Choksi, alleging the largest bank fraud in Indian history.

The vast web of Choksi's operations offers an insight into the scale of the scam and the brain behind it. A forensic report by John J Carney, the examiner appointed by the US bankruptcy court, in 2019 unravelled the numerous sham transactions carried out to "import" lewellery into India using a maze of secretly controlled shell entities. It would later emerge that the whole script ran far beyond India and helped a small firm to grow into a mammoth of a jewellery company.

According to documents that examined Gitaniali Group's operations, the organisation's structure included Samuels Jewelers and 4 C's Dlamond Distributors located in Hong Kong. Aston Luxury Grant New York's Beleviation.

in Hong Kong; Aston Luxury Group (New York); Belgdiam, Group (New York); Beignam, a company managed by Rohan Choksi (Mehul Choksi's son); subsidiaries in Hong Kong; a jewellery grad-ing company owned by Choksi's British Virgin Island ing company owned by Choksi's British Virgin Island firm and Chirag Patwa, a busi-ness head who worked with him; and several other entities mostly based in the United States.

Their purpose, according to Carney's report, was to create a wide and diverse web of companies across the Jewellery value chain to present what would appear to be a fully-integrated jewellery conglomerate. The real function, however, was to allegedly hoodwink customers. An example is a company called Independent Gemological Laboratories, purportedly an independent Jewellery grading laboratory, which was in fact owned 9999 per cent by Choksi and 0.01 per cent by his associate and co-conspirator. It was alleged to be passing off lab grown diamonds as mined ones.

The Central Bureau of Investigation (CBI) and the Their purpose, according

The Central Bureau of the Enforcement Directorate (ED) alleged that Choksi or his associates formed several entities across countries to cir-culate money and inventory associates formed several associates formed several entities across countries to circulate money and inventory whilst concealing their connection and thus rendering them "puppet vendors" (see box»). These were represented as independent third parties, when in reality they were entities owned or controlled by Choksi. Gitanjall, or employees of Choksi, according to Carney's report, and served to Carney's report, and served to circulate money and inventory among Samuels and related entities—in short, laundering the money. The examiner's team identified numerous transactions where funds were paid from Samuels to a puppet vendor, and then almost immediately sent to a disclosed Gitanjall entity, often in India.

Sarosh Zuiwalla, senior solicitor in London, says at least 30 alleged white-collar criminals who fled India chose safe havens like London and smaller island nations. "Switzerland has a rule of law, and so it can't be predicted how things will work out there." Zalwalla says. "Smaller countries are easier to migrate to and one can simply buy a passport (for those) for a few hundred thousand dollars."

He adds that it's "very Hunusual (for Choks) to have

He adds that it's "very usual (for Choksi) to have unusual (for Choks)) to have gone to Dominica from Antigua because it's a very small island and while the laws are very similar to English laws, one can't predict how the outcome will be because much of these proceedings could be closed circuit".

According to Merchant, It was always fame and fortune Choksi coveted. "If I have to point out a single most prominent trait of his, I would say it was the deep-eated compulsive obsession to prove himself to others." says Merchant, adding, "This, backed by his exceptionally high nervous energy, which clearly differentiated him from the rest of us. His quest was to do something

For instance, between January and May of 2021, the total PE Investments in the online pharmacy space hit $78.75 million, spread over three deals, while in 2020, it was only $11.2 million (three deals) and in 2018, $80.92 million (four deals). Moreover, the sector is also witnessing consolidation, with Reliance Industries buying NetMeds last year, and PharmEasy merging with rival Medlife a few weeks ago to forge the country's largest online phar-macy. Some investment is also rickling late that between the tlated him from the rest of us. Ils quest was to do something big, something dramatic." Given how everything has played out, Choksi, now 62, achieved all that but for all the wrong reasons. The other facet that those who know him point out is that there are no mistakes when it comes to clapsing his future and next no mistakes when it comes to planning his future and next moves. As he faces trial in Dominica, it's likely that he might still have a trick or two up his sleeve. That is, unless the law has well and truly run him into a blind alley – this time with no escape route. Some investment is also trickling into the telemedicine space, but the overall numbers compared to the opportunity it offers is still very small. The pandemic-induced lockdown last year forced many Indians to try out telemedicine and online medical consultations, leading PEs or sales their commitment in to raise their commitment in the space to $40.20 million in
