Huge refund amounts yet to reach Relevel users but company maintains transparency

ABHISHEK NAIR / Mumbai

Months after The Free Press Journal reported concerns being raised by job aspirants about not receiving refunds from Unacademy's Relevel, many are still demanding answers from the hiring tests platform over the reimbursement.

Relevel, which was launched by the edtech unicorn back in August 2021, aims to help job seekers get their job readiness and industry-relevant skills assessed with many of its courses catering to tech and non-tech fields, which includes Business Development, Software Testing, Full Stack Development, and more.

But former users who were initially interested in Relevel's job guarantee programme, which covers over 2000 job opportunities, and 600 plus companies, eventually left their courses midway through troubles with securing the refund continue.

"My EMIs are still being cut though I stopped the course a long time back. The only response I am getting is I have to pay the whole amount of Rs 72,000. I had left the course because my experience with it was not at all good," stated Bhushan Umbarkar, a resident of Wardha in Maharashtra, who wanted to pursue a course for Operations Manager but is now working as a Computer Operator in a public works department (PWD) office.

A student manager with Relevel had told The FPJ back in December 2022 that the platform was looking into all the concerns regarding the refund and was deciding on which ones to act on after analysing them.

Though status reports accessed by The FPJ then showed that not all the users were getting refunds based on their complaints, some say that they got a mail about the reimbursement which they have not received yet.

"I had attended only two classes with Relevel and I received a mail about the refund but it shows that they have denied me one in the status report," stated Rahul Hanwant, a Jaina resident who applied for the platform's Software Testing course.

Hanwant, who didn't have access to a laptop, joined the lectures on his phone but was not able to practise most of the things he was being taught. "The Relevel officials had initially told me that I can access the lectures through my phone with ease but since I didn't have a laptop I couldn't practise anything," said Hanwant, who still has Rs 4,500 being debited as EMI to the course though he maintains that he did not know of a loan being taken in his name.

Others like Vaibhav Kapase saw their EMIs being stopped by the loan support company, working with Relevel but felt disappointed about the money they had to spend on the lectures. "Though I don't have to pay EMIs any more, I feel bad about my Rs 9,000 going down the drain as the lectures and the tests conducted by Relevel had nothing in common," stated Vaibhav, who is currently unemployed and looking for jobs in Pune.

With a 14-day refund policy, which was made effective on October 31, 2022, by Relevel, the platform has been processing the refunds based on the nature of the complaint, the effectiveness of the resolution process, the duration of the course attended by the learner, and various other factors, according to sources.

"At Relevel, we have always kept the interests of Learners at the core of everything that we have done. This is enshrined in our refund policy as well, which is designed to be fair and just, flexible, and tailored to meet the nature of business and the unique circumstances of each user. On occasions where a refund is necessary, we strive to follow due process and process refund requests promptly and efficiently, ensuring a hassle-free experience for our Learners," a Relevel spokesperson told The FPJ.

But beyond the 14-day policy, and Relevel's stringent process to process the refunds, some have also highlighted other problems with the platform's course structure.

"I was told that I will only be receiving 25% of the fees as a rebate as I didn't give a single test after joining the course. The Relevel team didn't tell me the 'detailed investigation' they went through to come to this number as well. I didn't even use the portal for the most part," asserted another job aspirant, who added that the loan will only close once 75% of his payment to Relevel is complete.

"While we strive to provide a hassle-free experience, it's important to note that the final decision on refund criteria, eligibility, and amount rests with Relevel in accordance with documented and clearly communicated guidelines. Every claim is reviewed and refund processed after careful examination in line with our refund policy," the Relevel spokesperson added.

Tobacco addiction has seized 50% students in Maha tribal pockets

PUSHPITA CHATTERJEE / Mumbai

A recent study by Government Dental College and Hospital (GDCH), Nagpur found that 15.2% tribal school children are at oral pre-cancer stage in tribal-dominated districts of Maharashtra. The study was conducted between the ages 7 and 21 and 1 of every 2 of these students are said to be addicted to tobacco chewing. However, no student was found with an active cancer in all of these districts.

Surgical Treatment for 3480 such students with oral pre cancer has been funded by the Tribal Development Department of India while medicinal treatments have already begun for the rest who do not need surgical intervention. Awareness programs for these students, their parents and teachers have also been organised, said Dr Abhay Datarkar, Dean, GDCH.

Four most commonly found kinds of oral pre cancer among these students were Leukoplakia at 45%, Erythroplakia which is relatively very dangerous at 0.7%, Oral submucous fibrosis

(OSMF) at 2.2% and the most popular, Tobacco Pouch Keratosis (TPK) at 7.4%. "Tobacco chewing is more common among male students at 59% but not very uncommon among females at 43%. Designated counselors have been appointed at different project offices to spread awareness both to these students and elders around them," said HOD, Public Health Dentistry, GDCH, Dr Sachin Khatri. The Tribal Development Department of India, Nagpur

Division actively participated in identifying these oral pre cancer students and also brought in funds worth 75 Lakhs to install Co2 laser treatment facility at GDCH. These pre cancer students will go through surgery in the coming months.

This study was conducted by the Department of Public Health Dentistry, GDCH headed by Dr Khatri and his team of three doctors, Dr Aniket Dhote, Dr Noopur Kokhne and Dr Shilpa Warkere.

Will UK gov't crackdown on low-quality uni courses affect Indian students?

MEGHA CHOWDHURY / Mumbai

The UK government's plans to force universities to limit the number of students taking "low-value" degrees in England that fail to deliver good outcomes has caused a stir among the academic community. Courses with low numbers of graduates securing a professional job, moving forward on to postgraduate courses, or starting a business will be subject to strict controls, the UK Prime Minister and Education Secretary have announced.

However the new policy will restrict domestic student applications in England, experts argue the new plans will also make it harder for Indian students to pursue their aspirations as well. "This won't affect students going to reputed and top class universities. However, for students who are going for diplomas or to low ranked or unknown universities, they will face issues with admissions and greater difficulty in obtaining a student visa," said Karan Gupta, founder of study abroad career consultant Karan Gupta Consulting.

The UK government wants to make sure that universities and colleges are offering the same standard of high-quality provision expected in our schools, and

that young people are encouraged to choose the path that is right for them — whether it's a university degree, a higher technical qualification, or an apprenticeship. Dhaval Meheta, CEO of TNI Career

Counseling says, "it seems more like a warning. Universities will start looking closely at courses that don't deliver on placements or manipulate data as the government seems focused on solving the employment crisis in general as many universities have been marketing their courses to international students largely for masters programs that promise them jobs which aren't really available in the UK." "Due to COVID the last 3 years data is skewed anyways. Students should be careful in the upcoming years to pick courses based on historical data of the course performance for 2023 and 2024," added Dhaval. The problem, according to Aaryan Chatterjee, an Indian student now enrolled in the University of Surrey's Bachelor of Music programme, is the debt, not the classes. "Universities have transformed into money-making machines that burden students with debt and manipulative employment statistics," says the student.

"Who is defining a low value degree and based on what criteria? Learning music is literally the only thing I have a passion for and for me getting a degree isn't only about career earning. It's about learning, following one's passion, broadening horizons and exploring. Those have value too," stated Aaryan.
