Russia blocks NordVPN, Express VPN in bid to control content

BLOOMBERG September 3

RUSSIA BLOCKED ACCESS to six virtual private networks, including some of the world's most popular such services, as the government escalates its efforts to rein in the internet.

watchdog Roskomnadzor said in a statement Friday. These include material Russian authorities have deemed as extremist as well as what the regulator said was information relating to narcotics and child pornography.

to punitive restrictions and regularly fining international platforms including Alphabet Inc's Google and Facebook Inc. for failing to remove content flagged as illegal.

VPNs help circumvent restrictions on internet traffic and provide users with anonymity and greater security.

use VPNs for technical reasons that will be allowed to continue.

"Russia already has a long list of websites, messaging apps, and other digital services that are blacklisted, as well as a series of laws that threaten the prosecution of bloggers and allow authorities to ban websites without a court order," NordVPN said in an e-mailed statement.

are just another move to strengthen governmental control over online communications."

NordVPN destroyed its servers in Russia after the government sought access in 2019 and will continue to offer its products "through available channels," the statement said.

The move comes amid an increasingly harsh crackdown on opposition that began with the arrest of President Vladimir Putin's most vocal critic, Alexey Navalny, early this year.
