With respect to semicon-ductors, he acknowledged that although this segment is a smaller part of their business, smauer part of their business, they recognise the burgeoning demand for semiconductors. As part of the semiconductor business, it offers two types of electronic components: semi-conductors and crystal devices (like oscillators). "We understand the growing need and demand for semiconductors, especially in India; however, we also realise that profitability lawret to expand our business, but there is a lot ofcompetition, and we have to watch the profitability." he explained.

ROBOTICS SECTOR

ROBOTICS SECTOR
Furthermore, Epson sees substantial prospects in its robotics sector, especially against the backdrop of a rapidly growing manufacturing industry. "We believe that we could work with the Indian manufacturers to contribute to the production, as there are numerous of them with talented engineers with whom we can partner, "Ogawa said.

Epson's robots are already integrated across various sectors, such as finance and automotive, with about 1,000 operational robots in the country.

INDIAN BUSINESS

INDIAN BUSINESS
The company, which globally does about $510 billion worth of business annually, has a relatively smaller constribution from its operations in the country. Last year, it made annual revenues of $2,196.3 croe from its business in India. Proposition of revenue for India squile low-however, for Epon's business world-wide, it's the biggest growth market. "Moreover, with the population growing, we expect to grow rapidly, and we have high expectations for this market across all our verticals — printing, projectors, vobotics, and semiconductors—which shows growth potential," he added.

Fitch sees IT services revenue growth slowing with US, Europe headwind

Our Bureau Chennai

The Indian IT services sector's annual revenue growth is likely to slow to 8 per cent to 10 per cent in FY24-FY125 (financial years ending March), on a constant currency basis, from the FY23 average of 16.5 per cent as global IT spending will shrink on slower conomic growth in the US and Europe, Fitch Restrings said.
