Inflation has a weight problem

Analysis shows that CPI weights do not reflect pandemic realities and may well be understating it in some periods in the past two years

ISHAAN GERA
New Delhi, 19 November

In April last year, the Ministry of Statistics and Programme Implementation could not release data on the consumer price index. Given the country was under lockdown from end-March to mid-April 2020, the ministry could not gather responses on price changes in the basket of commodities. Later, it released CPI for these months based on imputed values. While the April period was just an aberration and the ministry has since been publishing CPI data every month, the index has not been adjusted to reflect the changes in consumption patterns during the pandemic. In contrast, in the US, the government changed the basket of goods to reflect pandemic realities. While India needs to pivot to a new consumption basket after the pandemic, it also needs a revised measure of how weights are assigned to different categories. The last time India updated these

OLDER WEIGHTAGES ARE DISTORTING CPI CALCULATIONS

Difference between augmented CPI and actual CPI (%)

Augmented CPI is calculated by deducting the irrelevant categories and then recalculating weighted averages for 299 items in the CPI calculation. Data for April-May is excluded for 2020 and 2021, as the government did not collect price data for commodities during this period. MOSPI, BS Analysis weights was in 2014, when the new CPI series reflected changes in weights based on the 2011-12 consumer expenditure survey. The 2017-18 consumer expenditure survey, which would have formed the basis of a revised goods basket, was junked by the government in 2019 due to inefficiencies.

Many of the categories that existed in the 2011-12 consumer expenditure have lost relevance since. Kerosene consumption, for instance, has reduced as many consumers have shifted to LPG connections. Similarly, landlines have become a thing of the past. A Business Standard analysis finds that if all such categories are excluded, then the weight of the commodities in CPI reduces by nearly 3.34 percentage points. By this measure, the increase in consumer prices in October was 0.26 percentage points lower than the actual figure for October. A similar analysis for other months shows that for most of the period, the consumer prices have been overestimated compared to last year.

During the pandemic, the effect would have been much worse as fuel consumption had reduced and spending on many items such as cinema halls had come to a halt. Besides, households cut back on frivolous spending as a result of the widespread uncertainty.

A BCG analysis shows that households were spending more on personal care apps and platforms last year in India. Similarly, in the case of food items, research indicates a reduction in 7-10 per cent from total expenditure, whereas there was a 15-19 per cent reduction in the non-food category.

If only the transportation categories were excluded, the CPI weight would reduce by another 6-7 percentage points. The analysis does not consider spending on items like fuel, which would further distort the calculations.

Nor does it account for changes in the weight of commodities. The partial results of the consumer expenditure survey, which did find their way to certain publications, indicate that the share of education and rent in total consumption expenditure had risen, whereas the share of cereals had fallen. Private final consumption expenditure shows a similar pattern.

If one accounts for rent and education, then an analysis shows that house rent on average has increased 3.9 per cent, and private tuition and coaching expenses have gone up 5.5 per cent. In contrast, the increases in CPI have averaged 5.6 per cent.

While India certainly needs data from a new consumption survey, the methodology needs a change as well. At present, consumption surveys are a quinquennial exercise. The government needs to adopt international best practices. In the US, for instance, the consumption survey is an ongoing process, as the government keeps altering the sample size and includes new households. India needs a similar approach so that the revision to the statistics is more timely and in tune with the ground realities.

NEWSMAKER / SAURABH KIRPAL / SENIOR ADVOCATE, SUPREME COURT

A question of preference

ADITI PHADNIS
New Delhi, 19 November

His story, the frustration and prejudice that has dogged his professional and, by extension, personal life, begins in 2017, when Kirpal was approached by Justice Gita Mittal to become a Delhi high court judge. He agreed. But the matter did not progress beyond that

"In 2018, India's Supreme Court said being a homosexual is not just about the sexual act you perform in the privacy of your bedroom. It is more than that. It is about the right to equality, the right to dignity that the Constitution guarantees to every citizen of our country. And the fact that I have the freedom to choose my own partner in life, not just for sex but for my partner in life... any attempt to discriminate on the basis of whom I have chosen as my partner is a violation of the judgment in spirit, but almost certainly also in letter" said senior Supreme Court advocate Saurabh Kirpal, 49, in an interview to journalist Faye D'Souza.

The time to test the proposition has arrived. The Supreme Court collegium, headed by Chief Justice N V Ramana, has recommended Kirpal's elevation as Delhi High Court judge. If the government accepts the recommendation, India will get its first openly gay judge.

His story, the frustration and prejudice that has dogged his professional and, by extension, personal life, begins in 2017, when Kirpal, who has a lucrative practice, was approached by Justice Gita Mittal to become a Delhi high court judge. He agreed. But the matter did not progress beyond that.

Exactly why, nobody knows. It could be, Kirpal says, because his partner of 20 years is a Swiss national. But the wife of Vivian Bose, a Supreme Court justice in the fifties, was American. The current minister of external affairs has a Japanese wife. So could it be that it was not the nationality of his partner but his sexual orientation that was coming in the way?

The Supreme Court collegium has forwarded his name four times. Former Chief Justice of India S A Bobde even wrote to then Union Law Minister Ravi Shankar Prasad, asking for clarification on the intelligence inputs on Kirpal. It is not known whether he received a reply. Sources said it was the law ministry that had been sitting on the file. But even that is not clear.

Kirpal has had a brilliant professional career. He has worked on several important cases, including the landmark petition that led to the decriminalisation of Section 377, which deemed consensual same-sex relations a crime. He represented petitioners Navtej Johar and Ritu Dalmia in the Supreme Court. His friends say he has the capacity to immediately get to the nub of the matter on a range of legal issues — from the citizenship law to the complexities of corporate and business law. "And he can talk about law while cooking up a great curry," one of his friends says.

Kirpal read physics at St Stephen's College in Delhi and went up to Oxford. He also has a master's degree from Cambridge University. He worked briefly with the United Nations in Geneva before returning to India in the 1990s. His father, BN Kirpal, was Chief Justice of India. Kirpal has worked with former Attorney General and well-known lawyer Mukul Rohatgi. He has also edited a book, Sex and the Supreme Court.

Senior Supreme Court advocate Sanjay Hegde strongly rejects the suggestion that diversity tokenism is responsible for Kirpal's elevation. "He is a very good lawyer and he has been recommended (for judgeship) based on undoubted competence, to which his background and lineage must be added. If he'd been straight, he would have become a judge a long time ago. No one would have been able to stop him" Hegde told Business Standard.

Now, many senior members of the bar are waiting to see what Chief Justice Ramana will do on the matter — acquiesce before the government or take the judiciary on a new trajectory of independence and assertion.

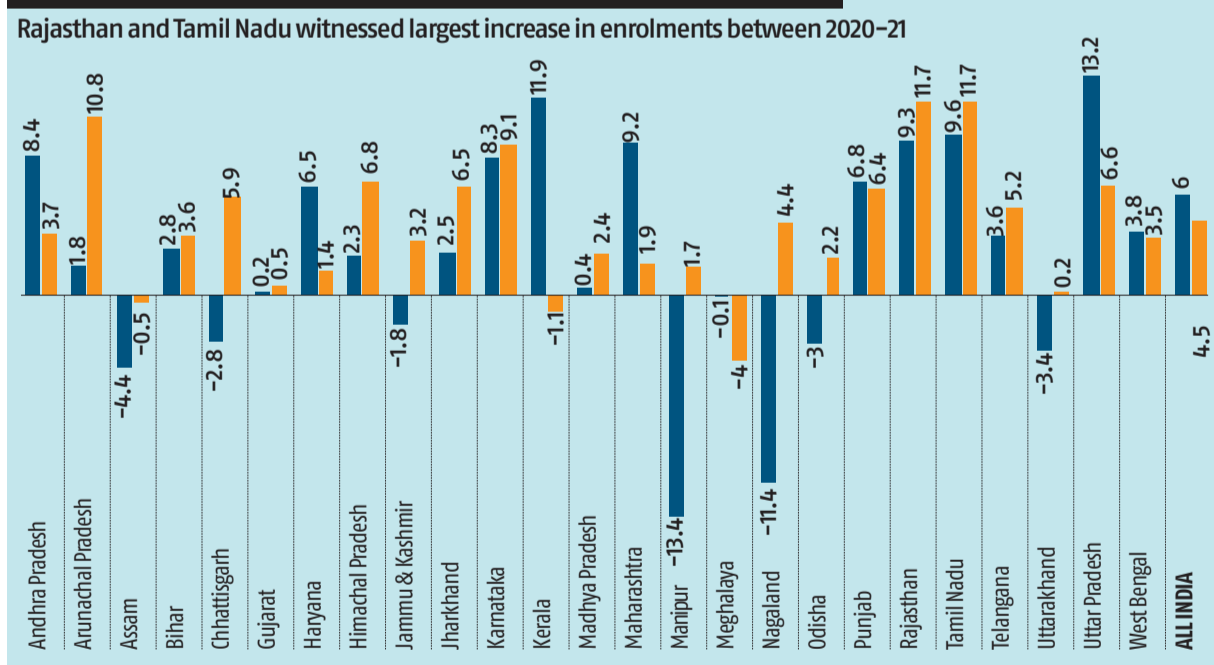

No one in the government is saying much. But the Rashtriya Swayamsevak Sangh (RSS) has a confusing stand on the matter. In a book titled The RSS: Roadmaps for the 21st Century, senior RSS leader Sunil Ambekar quotes its general secretary Dattatreya Hosabale as saying: "I don't think homosexuality should be considered a criminal offence as long as it doesn't affect the lives of others in society. Sexual preferences are private and personal." But he adds that Hosabale has clarified that "gay marriages should not be institutionalised for it will institutionalise homosexuality. So it should be prohibited".

In the coming months, a landmark case will play out in the courts. On November 30, the Delhi High Court will hold final hearings on the legalisation of gay marriage. Solicitor general Tushar Mehta, appearing for the central government, has submitted to the court that marriage in India is permissible only between a biological man and a biological woman. Kirpal's elevation and the high court order will indicate in which direction India is going.

Govt school enrolments drop in eight states post-pandemic

Kerala and Gujarat were the only states where enrolment of boys in government schools increased, whereas girls' enrolment dipped

EIGHT OF 25 STATES REGISTER DECLINE IN GOVERNMENT SCHOOL ENROLMENTS IN POST-PANDEMIC PERIOD

ISHAAN GERA
New Delhi, 19 November

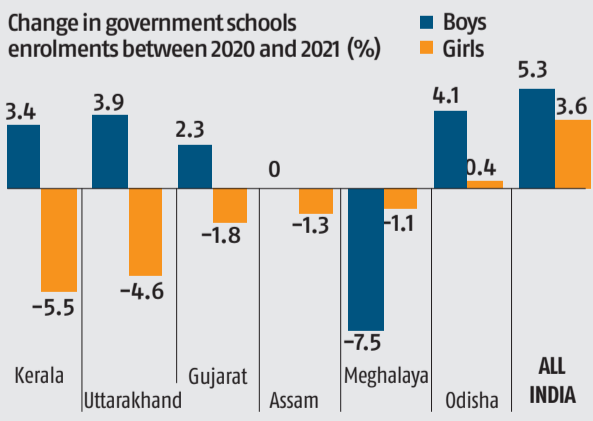

The headline figure for this year's Annual Status of Education Report was the rise in government school enrolments across the country compared to the pre-pandemic period. While government school enrolments had reduced to 64.3 per cent for children aged 6-14, in 2018, the pandemic reversed the trend with over 70 per cent enrolled in government schools across the country.

However, a Business Standard analysis shows that not all states exhibit this trend. Eight of the 25 states surveyed under ASER have, in fact, witnessed a decline in government enrolments. North-eastern states have led the charge in recording a decline. In Manipur, government enrolments declined 13.4 per cent in 2021 as compared to 2018, and Nagaland witnessed an 11.4 per cent decline. In Odisha, the fall was 3 per cent, whereas Assam and Chhattisgarh saw a 4.4 per cent and 2.4 per cent decline, respectively. On the other end of the spectrum, Uttar Pradesh and Kerala witnessed the most significant migration to government schools, with 13.2 per cent and 11.9 per cent of students in the states shifting schools. However, year-wise analysis shows that the most significant changes in school enrolment happened in Tamil Nadu, Rajasthan and Arunachal Pradesh, as all showed an over ten percentage point increase in government enrolments since 2020. Compared to 2020, registrations in Uttar Pradesh were up 6.6 per cent. Kerala, on the other hand, may be on a reversal again. Comparison from last year shows that in 2021 government school enrolments dipped 1.1 percentage points. While registration for boys in government schools across Kerala increased 3.4 per cent between 2020 and 2021, enrolments for girls dropped 5.5 per cent. In Gujarat, too, while more boys were enrolled in government schools, girls' enrolment declined by 1.8 percentage points. Gujarat was the only state where fewer girls attended government schools than boys, and in all other states, enrolment of girls in government schools was higher than enrollment for boys. Drop out rates across the country remained the same in 2021.
