3	Brief Profile	Gabriel has over 25 years of experience in technology, consulting, and engineering within the automotive and discrete manufacturing industries. This will help us to further develop our business both in terms of industry network and strategy. In the first part of his career, he worked for Siemens in various capacities, including consulting, strategy, and business development. The multinational technology conglomerate had just acquired Nixdorf Computers and was assembling a global information & communications division, of which Gabriel was a part. Upon Atos' acquisition of the Siemens IT division, Gabriel worked for this leading European IT organization for three years. In Germany, he took over engineering services and developed the IOT business at the intersection of Cloud and Edge. In 2014, he joined Accenture's newly formed Digital division. He helped to develop 'Industry X', which provides consulting, cloud, embedded software, engineering, and validation services to manufacturing clients. Gabriel was responsible for the automotive business in the DACH region and for the automotive transformational consulting team. During this time, he focused on digital transformation and software defined vehicles. Gabriel will be based out of Munich. Originally from Berlin, Gabriel has lived in Munich for more than 20 years. During his free time, he enjoys sports in the Alps, preferably running and cycling. He has a keen interest in theoretical computer science especially artificial intelligence, where he actively publishes.
