Plan for one of world's biggest coal mines challenged in Chhattisgarh

Goal India is holding talks with residents opposed to a mine expansion that would create one of the world's largest operations producing the fuel. Protests against plans for the Gewa site in Chhattisgarh threaten to complicate the company's ability to win approvals to expand annual capacity to 70 million tonnes. Output at that volume would see the site become the single biggest global source of the fossil fuel, according to Coal India.

Rising power demand has pushed India to prioritise energy security and boost out-put of coal, which continues to account for about 70 energy security and boost out-put of coal, which continues to account for about 70 per cent of electricity generation. Residents of the area close to Gevra have raised concerns over air pollution, the impact on ground water levels and compensation for acquired land, said Deepak Sahu, joint secretary for Korba district— where the mine is located— at Chhattisgarh Kisan Sabha, a farmers' union in the state. Coal India and its sub-sidiaries have faced challenges in ramping up other operations, including in Chhattisgarh, and a public hearing was held this week at the Gevra site.

"The company has taken considerable measures to considerable measures to address the issue of pollution associated with the mining process," and studies have shown there's no impact on ground water levels in the Korba district, a spokesman at South Eastern Coalfields, the unit that operates Gevra, said by whose.
