RAM JETHMALANI 1923-2019

Intellectual dilettante who never minced words

For many he was an utterly captivating, extraordinary character. For others, he was a source of constant trouble, a man who seemed to represent no moral principles, was politically unscrupulous and an intellectual dilettante. Ram Jethmalani, the most unpredictable of politicians lived a full life and died four days short of his 96th birthday.

There is little that is not known about his personal life: that he started school (Tekchand Patshala, for which his father had to pay what in those days was a princely sum of ₹4 a month) soon he grew it. He completed school from Sukkur, Pakistan, at the age of 14 after getting several double promotions. His biographer, Susan Adelman writes about Jethmalani's naughtiness in school: "One day, when he was 14, the principal called all the students to come to the schoolyard at 1 pm. When they asked why, he said: 'I am going to thrash Ram Jethmalani for ruining the morals of the school'. It seems that Ram had asked the boys in his class what they did at night to amuse themselves in their rooms. They said they would usually read or study, and he said he would teach them something they could do by themselves that would be much more fun." His father, ignoring his fascination for his grandfather's vocation, the law, sent him first to study science and then engineering. Jethmalani was miserable. Finally, he joined the SC Shahani Law College in 1939 and graduated as a lawyer at 17 in 1941. He fought and won his case to be permitted to practice law - not at 21 but at 18. It helped that he had got a first class first in law school. He began his law practice at 18.

At 18, he got married to Durga Ahuja, 16. Jethmalani shuttled between Bombay and Karachi as long as he could. But in 1947 when the killing started, he packed his family off and left Pakistan himself. He saw his family in a squalid refugee camp and resolved that he would never be poor again. He was to tell himself and his family that many times, later.

In Bombay, the family struggled to adjust. Jethmalani took on all the cases he could get: criminal, corporate (Sindhi bankers challenging foreign exchange laws lined up at the door when he won one case) and armed robbers and dacoits as well. He fell in love and married a second time while already married to Durga - Ratna Shahani, herself a lawyer and later, his legal associate.

He took on a lot of refugee cases. This was par for the course - Indians saw refugees as a nuisance and treated most of them like second class citizens. The law treated them no better. Ram Jethmalani fought for better laws not just for himself but for everyone else who had come to India in the hope of a better future mandated by the Constitution of India in 1950.

Then came socialist laws. The licence quota era of Nehru and later, Indira Gandhi, produced many economic deviants - smugglers, etc - who helped provide the well-heeled with the means and methods to support their lifestyle which the government deemed illegal. Naturally, they needed legal help. One of his colleagues described Jethmalani as the smugglers' lawyer. Jethmalani told people: "when I see a man come into my office with his pockets bulging with smuggling money, I consider it my duty to relieve him of his wealth". At one time, smugglers comprised 90 per cent of Jethmalani's practice.

By now, his legal career - specifically, criminal law - was on a roll. But he could also see the roots of what was wrong with India. He targeted Nehru, for his pusillanimity on the war with China and attacked him vigorously. Indira Gandhi and the Congress party were his next targets, especially after the emergency was declared. Jethmalani was in political exile in the US at the time, facilitated by friends: he drummed up support against the emergency that culminated in Jimmy Carter becoming president and criticising the emergency for suppression of liberty and freedom.

The first election Jethmalani fought was in 1971 from Ulhasnagar for its Sindhi population. He was supported by the Bharatiya Jana Sangh (BJS) the precursor of the BJP. He lost. Meanwhile, laws like the Maintenance of Internal Security Act (MISA) and others were keeping him extremely busy: not just because they targeted smugglers but also because they were being used against political opponents (the current government might want to study this phase of Jethmalani's career). He was involved in the strategy session in the Kasbavanand Bharati case and his broad argument went something like this: "The Supreme Court of Timbuktu has decided that a prostitute can be a virgin with retrospective effect".

It was no surprise that Jethmalani contested the Bombay North West seat in the Lok Sabha in 1977 and won by a huge margin. He lived on Janpath and soon had to put up a board outside his gate saying he had stopped accepting legal cases. 90 per cent of his work was pro bono. Politics engaged him more and more but he never hid his way of life. On one occasion, Morarji Desai pleaded with him to stop drinking publicly. "You stick to your pissy and I'll stick to my whisky" he is supposed to have told him.

PM Narendra Modi consoles the family members of late Ram Jethmalani after paying him the last respects, at their residence, in New Delhi, on Sunday

VOICES

"One of the best aspects of Shri Ram Jethmalani Ji was the ability to speak his mind. And, he did so without any fear. During the dark days of the Emergency, his fortitude and fight for public liberties will be remembered. Helping the needy was an integral part of his persona"
— Prime Minister Narendra Modi

"In his death India has lost an eminent jurist, an able administrator and a seasoned parliamentarian"
— Former Prime Minister Manmohan Singh

"India is yet to see a better criminal lawyer than Ram Jethmalani. He was well respected not only by the Judiciary but also by the legal fraternity...Courageous to the core, he undertook many legal struggles against the high and mighty. He was a saviour of democracy in the truest sense"
— British-Indian industrialist Gopichand Hinduja

"With the passing away of Ram Jethmalani, the country has lost a 'giant of a man' who was a rare combination of constitutional expertise, razor-sharp understanding of criminal law, and a 'roaring tiger' when it comes to defending his clients"
— Solicitor General Tushar Mehta

World's worst bad-loan mess set to worsen on India's cash crunch

RAHUL SATUA & P R SANJIV
Mumbai, 8 September

A prolonged shadow-banking crisis and hurdles in bankruptcy rules are set to keep India atop the world's worst bad-debt pile, even as Italy, which held the title previously, quickens the clean-up of its lenders.

Moody's Investors Service to Credit Suisse Group warned that more loans may sour in the Asian nation's banking system. More than 2.4 per cent of total loans in India's banking system may be under stress on top of the 9.6 per cent bad debt ratio as of June, the highest among major economies, Credit Suisse estimates shows. Italy, on the other hand, has nearly halved its ratio to 8.5 per cent in the last three years.

The failure to slash stressed assets is undermining India's efforts to revive economic growth that has cooled to a six-year low. A cash crunch in the shadow-banking sector that started with the collapse of IL&FS Group last year and the delays in the bankruptcy process are adding to the challenges faced by banks as they seek to tidy up their balance sheets.

"When the economy decelerates like this we will see non-performing loans go up," said Saurabh Mukherjee, founder of investment advisory firm Marcellus Investment Managers Ltd. "You'll see more bad loans come through as we approach the first anniversary of IL&FS meltdown."

Of the nation's 12 largest delinquent borrowers which Reserve Bank of India asked lenders to push to bankruptcy in 2017, only six have been resolved so far, data compiled by Bloomberg shows. The delays highlight impediments to the process including conflicting regulations and lack of resolution infrastructure, which is derailing a 270-day resolution deadline set by the Insolvency law.

HK police fire tear gas as clashes erupt after thousands appeal to Trump

REUTERS
Hong Kong, 8 September

Hong Kong police fired tear gas to disperse protesters in the upmarket Causeway Bay shopping district on Sunday, after demonstrators had rallied at the US.

Consulate calling for help in bringing democracy to the Chinese-ruled city.

Police moved on protesters from the Central business district who dispersed to nearby Admiralty, the bar district of Wan Chai and on to Causeway Bay in a now familiar pattern of cat-and-mouse clashes over three months of unrest.

Activists set barricades, smashed windows, started street fires and vandalised the MTR metro station in Central, the smartest district of the former British colony.

Central district, home to banks, jewellery shops and top-brand shopping arcades, was awash in graffiti, broken glass and bricks torn up from pathways. Protesters set fires from cardboard boxes, building barricades with metal fencing.

"We can't leave because there are riot police," said protesters Oscar, 20, in Causeway Bay. "They fired tear gas from the station. We are heading to North Point." North Point is east of Causeway Bay.

Thousands of protesters earlier sang the Star Spangled Banner and called on US President Donald Trump to "liberate" the city. They waved the Stars and Stripes and placards demanding democracy.

"Fight for freedom, stand with Hong Kong," they shouted before handing over petitions at the US Consulate. "Resist Beijing, liberate Hong Kong."

US Defense Secretary Mark Esper on Saturday urged China to exercise restraint in Hong Kong, which returned to Chinese rule in 1997.

Esper made his call in Paris as police in Hong Kong prevented protesters from blocking access to the airport but fired tear gas for a second night running in the densely populated district of Mong Kok.

Pockets of protest broke out in Kowloon over the harbour from the main island of Hong Kong on Sunday night, including in Prince Edward, close to Mong Kok.

Last month Trump suggested China should "humanely" settle the problem in Hong Kong before a trade deal is reached with Washington. Earlier Trump called the protests "riots" that were a matter for China to deal with.

The vandalism started in the evening. Police have responded to violence over 14 weeks with water cannon, rubber bullets and tear gas.

Several arrests were made. Hong Kong returned to China under a "one country, two systems" formula that guarantees freedoms not enjoyed on the mainland. Many Hong Kong residents fear Beijing is eroding that autonomy.

Taliban says US 'will be harmed' after Trump halts secret talks

AFP/PTI
Kabul, 8 September

The Taliban said the US "will be harmed more than anyone" but left the door open for future negotiations Sunday after President Donald Trump abruptly announced that he had called off year-long talks to end America's longest war.

"We still... believe that the American side will come back to this position... Our fight for the past 18 years should have proven to the Americans that we will not be satisfied until we witness the complete end of the occupation," the group said in a statement released on Twitter by spokesman Zabihullah Mujahid.

The statement said the insurgents had "finalised" a deal with the US that had been expected to allow Washington to begin withdrawing troops in exchange for security promises from the Taliban. It added that both sides had been preparing for the deal to be announced and signed when Trump tweeted late Saturday that he had "called off peace negotiations".

Trump had cited a Taliban attack in Kabul on Thursday which killed 12 people including a US soldier as his reason for calling off the talks, including a secret meeting with the insurgents at Camp David in Maryland planned for this weekend.

But the Taliban dismissed his reasoning in their statement, saying it showed "neither experience nor patience", and accused the US of killing "hundreds of Afghans" in the fighting. "Americans will be harmed more than any other," by Trump's decision, the statement said, adding that the US' "credibility will be harmed, their anti-peace stance will become more visible to the world, their casualties and financial losses will increase, and the US role in international political interaction will be discredited even further."
