BETTING ON STAR POWER

Hollywood glamour reviving endangered Broadway play

Producers pin hopes on celebrity-led casts to earn profit

MICHAEL PAULSON
August 10

Stars are headlining a number of Broadway plays this season, including George Clooney, Robert Downey Jr, Mia Farrow & Denzel Washington (left to right)

ROBERT DOWNEY JR is deep in rehearsals for his Broadway debut next month as an AI-obsessed novelist in 'McNeal'. Next spring, George Clooney arrives for his own Broadway debut in 'Good Night, and Good Luck', and Denzel Washington returns, after a seven-year absence, to star in 'Othello' with Jake Gyllenhaal.

Then comes an even more surprising debut: Keanu Reeves plans to begin his Broadway career in the fall of 2025, opposite his longtime 'Bill & Ted' slacker-buddy Alex Winter in 'Waiting for Godot', the ur-two-guys-being-unimpressive tragicomedy.

Broadway, still adapting to sharply higher production costs and audiences that have not fully rebounded since the coronavirus pandemic, is betting big on star power, hoping that a helping of Hollywood glamour will hasten its rejuvenation.

Even for an industry long accustomed to stopovers by screen and pop stars, the current abundance is striking. It reflects a new economic calculus by many producers, who have concluded that short-run plays with celebrity-led casts are more likely to earn a profit than the expensive razzle-dazzle musicals that have long been Broadway's bread and butter.

For the actors, there is another factor: As TV networks and streaming companies cut back on scripted series, and as Hollywood focuses on franchise films, the stage offers a chance to tell more challenging stories.

"Look, certainly the paychecks are incredible when you're wearing a rubbersuit, but the payoff you feel inside when you're doing theater is an even greater reward," said Christian Slater, who will be performing Off Broadway this winter in a Sam Shepard play, 'Curse of the Starving Class', opposite Calista Flockhart.

The result is an outcome that few would have predicted a decade ago, when industry insiders were wringing their hands about the plight of plays on Broadway, where most tickets are purchased by tourists drawn to song and dance. For a time, it seemed like plays might almost disappear from the Broadway menu; instead, they are proliferating.

"Almost our entire model is limited-run star engagements," said the producer Greg Nobile, whose company, Seaview, had a hit last season with a 17-week revival of 'An Enemy of the People' starring Jeremy Strong. This season it is doubling down, starting next month with a revival of 'Romeo and Juliet' featuring Kit Connor, a star of the popular Netflix teen show 'Heartstopper', and Rachel Zegler, who played Maria in the 2021 'West Side Story' film, followed by the Clooney play. "I believe right now, to get anybody's attention in any sector, things need to be an event."

Since the pandemic, film and television stars have brought buzz and audiences to a number of Broadway plays, including Sarah Jessica Parker and Matthew Broderick in 'Plaza Suite', Samuel L. Jackson in 'The Piano Lesson', Jessica Chastain in 'A Doll's House' and Jodie Comer in 'Prima Facie'. Producers took note, and among the screen stars headlining plays on New York stages in the coming months, both on Broadway and off, are Kenneth Branagh, Kieran Culkin, Adam Driver, Mia Farrow, Daniel Dae Kim, Julianna Margulies, Bob Odenkirk, Jim Parsons and Marisa Tomei.

As with everything on Broadway, finances play a role. The money risked by investors on plays is much lower than on musicals, which tend to have bigger casts, more elaborate sets, and, of course, musicians, and which have become increasingly expensive to produce. A new musical these days often costs more than $20 million to bring to Broadway — "Boop!" a new musical based on Betty Boop that is opening next spring, is being capitalised for up to $26 million. Plays generally cost less than half as much — the 'Romeo and Juliet' revival is being capitalised for up to $7 million, according to a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Of course, the potential upside is also lower. A successful play might return 30% to investors; the musical juggernauts (which are few and far between) can return many times that by sustaining long runs in large theaters and spinning off tours. (Of the 24 new Broadway musicals that opened over the last two seasons, only one, 'Juliet', has become profitable thus far. Two others, 'Hell's Kitchen' and 'The Outsiders', have plausible paths to profitability, but it is too soon to know for sure.)

Parsons, who has embraced stage work since the end of his television series, 'The Big Bang Theory', is featured in a revival of 'Our Town' that begins performances next month, with a cast that also includes Katie Holmes. "The pandemic did plenty of things to me, as it did to many people, and I have to think that one of them was that I really crave things that force me into contact with other humans," he said in an interview.

The pay on Broadway is not Hollywood-high, but it's not bad. —NYT

Israeli airstrike kills nearly 100 in Gaza school refuge

Cairo, August 10

AN ISRAELI AIR STRIKE on a Gaza City school compound housing displaced Palestinian families killed around 100 people, the Gaza Civil Emergency Service said on Saturday. Israel said around 20 militants had been operating at the compound. Video from the site showed body parts scattered around and more bodies being carried away and covered in blankets on the floor. Empty food tins lay in a puddle of blood, and burnt mattresses and a child's doll lay among the debris.

In another video, men prayed over a dozen body bags laid out on the ground of the Tabeen school complex. The territory's Civil Emergency Service, which has a credible record in stating casualty numbers, and the Hamas-run government media office said in separate statements that the complex had been attacked as its occupants were performing dawn prayers. "So far, there are more than 93 martyrs, including 11 children and six women. There are unidentified remains," Palestinian civil defence spokesperson Mahmoud Bassal told a televised press conference.

Tens of thousands of displaced Palestinians have sought shelter in Gaza's schools, most of which have been closed since the war began 10 months ago. Around 350 families had been sheltering at the compound, Bassal said — some of the hundreds of thousands of Palestinians displaced by Israel's onslaught on Gaza. The upper floor housing families and the lower floor, used as a mosque, were both hit, he said.

The Israeli military said the death toll was inflated. "The compound, and the mosque that was struck within it, served as an active Hamas and Islamic Jihad military facility," Lieutenant Colonel Nadav Shoshani said on X.

Damage at the site of an Israeli strike on a school sheltering displaced people in Gaza City on Saturday

He said the numbers published by the Hamas-run media office did not appear to correspond to the Israel Defense Forces' information, but the army provided no evidence of that. An Israeli army official said the part of the mosque that was struck was reserved for men.

"This was verified by intelligence, and the strike was carried out using three small, precise munitions which cannot cause the scale of damage that the Palestinians are reporting," the official said. It was not immediately clear which floor or floors the videos had been filmed on.

Susan Wojcicki, former YouTube CEO, dies after battling cancer

August 10

YOUTUBE'S FORMER CHIEF executive and long-time Google executive Susan Wojcicki died on Saturday at the age of 56 after a two-year battle with lung cancer. "It is with profound sadness that I share the news of Susan Wojcicki passing. My beloved wife of 26 years and mother to our five children left us today after 2 years of living with non-small cell lung cancer," Dennis Troper, Wojcicki's husband, said in a Facebook post.

"Over the last two years, even as she dealt with great personal difficulties, Susan devoted herself to making the world better through her philanthropy, including supporting research for the disease that ultimately took her life," Google Chief Executive Sundar Pichai said in a blog post.

One of the most prominent women in tech, Wojcicki joined Google in 1999 to become one of the first few employees of the web search leader, years before it acquired YouTube.

Google bought YouTube in 2006 for $1.65 billion.

Before becoming CEO of YouTube in 2014, Wojcicki was senior vice president for ad products at Google.

Bangladesh's chief justice, central bank chief resign

Protesters demonstrate at high court premises in Dhaka on Saturday

Dhaka, August 10

BANGLADESH'S CHIEF JUSTICE and central bank governor have resigned, officials said on Saturday, as student protests that forced PM Sheikh Hasina to flee have widened to target more officials appointed during her time in office. Chief Justice Obaidul Hassan resigned, the law ministry's adviser Asif Nazrul said in a Facebook video post, after students warned him of "dire consequences" if he did not. Reuters could not immediately contact Hassan.

Nazrul, an adviser in the new caretaker government, urged protesters to remain peaceful. "Don't damage any public property," he said. Bangladesh Bank Governor Abdur Rouf Talukder has also resigned but his resignation has not been accepted given the importance of the position, finance ministry adviser Salehuddin Ahmed told reporters. Reuters could not contact Talukder. Days earlier, four deputy governors were forced to resign after about 300 to 400 bank officials protested against what they said was corruption by top officials.

The vice chancellor of Dhaka University, ASM Maksud Kamal, has also resigned, the university said. Reuters was unable to contact Kamal. The university has been the epicentre of deadly protests that escalated in July against quotas in government jobs before morphing into an oust-Hasina campaign.

The recent uprising killed about 300 people, many of them students.

Dark side of competitive sports: Hyper-controlling parents, anxiety

Namita.Devidayal

At a recent national tennis tournament for under-16s in Mumbai, one of the players went to the washroom during her break and came out shaking. When her coach asked her what had happened, she said her opponent's mother had followed her in and threatened her. She wanted to file a complaint but had no proof. The girl won the match but lost her romance with sportsmanship.

"I wish my parents understood me better and were more supportive."
What is clearly a global phenomenon is more amplified in India for two reasons, say sports psychologists. First, Indian parents see their children as an extension of themselves. They often project unresolved ambition onto their progeny, pushing them into Kota Factory-like situations. Second, mental her depression and dropped out of the French Open in 2021, or legendary swimmer Michael Phelps who has shared his ups and downs with the seamless ease of his butterfly stroke.

"In India, parents tend to be over-involved—like you often see them coaching the coach and they want to be present for all the matches," says sports psychologist Urja Mehta, a former state-level foot-balls. "There's a thin line between nurturing and pushing. If the latter happens, children might be too scared to tell their parents they don't want to compete in a particular tournament, or compete at all."

There is also a generational divide, says Mehta, referring to an older Olympic athlete she had encountered who lightly dismissed the need for sports psychology. Gradually, however, and with increased exposure, coaches are becoming more open. "Since coaches are the first point of contact for young athletes, we have been educating them through sports foundations across India and it is really nice to see them interested," she says.

health is still not considered Many Indian parents see their children as an extension of themselves

"Frankly I prefer that the parents should not even be around when the child is training, or watch from a safe distance," says swimming coach Shailesh Chavan. "Sometimes they interfere and try to push their child ahead of another."
Children are being pushed from a younger and younger age to perform. For example, a coach had referred an eight-year-old child in Mumbai to a counsellor because he was having sleep issues. The boy loved tennis and had started playing competitively but his mother used to prepare weekly excel sheets of rankings in his age group and stick them around his bedroom.

While this year's Olympics comes to a close, what continues closer to home is the dark side of competitive sports filled with hyper-controlling parents and distressed children. More and more young players are showing signs of high anxiety and early burnout, especially among those playing individual sports like badminton, tennis, swimming and, of late, shooting and chess.
"A lot of the young athletes I counsel say that apart from the pressure that they experience on the field, they feel even more pressure from their parents," says Dr Sani-ka Divekar, head, sports psychology division, MPower, a mental health facility in Mumbai. "Parents sometimes become the harshest critics after a child loses a game, and I hear a lot of children say, on par with physical health, despite sportspersons in other countries unabashedly speaking out about it—whether it was American gymnast Simone Biles who opted out of the 2020 Olympics with the full support of her family, or Japan's tennis champion Naomi Osaka, who spoke about really appreciates how her parents supported her in equal measure whether she won or lost. If parents badger a child when he loses, the child will over-ruminate so much that it will definitely change the way he plays next time and is unlikely to grow into a successful athlete, she sug-

Centre advances target for 20% ethanol-mixing in petrol to '25-'26

TIMES NEWS NETWORK

New Delhi: Union home and cooperation minister Amit Shah on Saturday said govt has decided to advance the target of 20% ethanol blending in petrol from 2030 to 2025-26, appealing to sugar cooperatives to help achieve the target by ensuring that all sugar mills produce ethanol in two years, setting up multi-dimensional bio-fuels production plants and increasing efficiency of the existing sugar mills.

Referring to its quantitative growth potential where 1,000 crore litre ethanol would be required in the sale of 5,000 crore litre petrol, Shah said that increasing share of ethanol-blended petrol would reduce import bill of petrol and increase profits of sugar mills and sugarcane farmers in addition to saving the environment. His remarks came a day after the cabinet approved modified Pradhan Mantri JI-VAN Yojana to keep pace with latest developments in the field of biofuels. The scheme aims to provide remunerative income to farmers for agri-residue, address environmental pollution, create local employment opportunities, and contribute to India's energy security and self reliance.

Shah was addressing a sugar conclave organised by the National Federation of Cooperative Sugar Factories. He said govt is ready to support plants. "Sugar industry produced 38 crore litre ethanol earlier & there was limited use of it, which has increased to 370 crore litre today," he said.

Man who put up pump that killed child gets 2 yrs in jail

Rebecca.Samervel
@timesofindia.com

Mumbai: Observing that activities which play with lives of the innocent public need to be curbed, a sessions court convicted and sentenced a 60-year-old Wadala man to two years of rigorous imprisonment after a 12-year-old boy was electrocuted while playing with friends in 2015. The incident occurred due to the rash and negligent act of installing an electric water pump near a footpath. The judge stated that the facts do not make out a case to show any leniency to the accused, Amjadali Khan, and that the maximum sentence should be imposed. The accused was also fined Rs 25,000, which will be given to the child Atif Beg's parents as compensation. "At the same time, a fine amount needs to be imposed, from which compensation can be provided to the parents who lost their child in the unfortunate incident," Judge S B Pawar said. The judge noted that there was accidental death of a child due to criminal negligence on the part of the accused, as he did not take due care and precaution while installing the electric motor, which was near a footpath where the general public had access. Atif went out to play on Dec 25, 2015, at 3.30 pm near a monorail station at Wadala (E). At 5.30 pm, 2-3 children residing nearby came running towards Atif's father, Nafiz Beg, and told him Atif had sustained an electric shock. When Nafiz went to the footpath, he saw water pumps were kept in a white box adjacent to the wall of a room, and Atif was lying unconscious. People had gathered. Eyewitnesses told him Atif sustained electric shocks due to open wires of the water pumps in the box. Atif was rushed to Sion Hospital and declared dead before admission. Nafiz came to know the pumps were installed by the accused. A police complaint was filed. Among those who deposited were eyewitnesses. While the accused was initially booked for culpable homicide, he was found guilty of causing death by negligence. The judge said it was not clearly established by the prosecution that the electricity supply to the pump was unauthorised. "There is further no technical evidence to establish as to which particular part, either electric wire or the motor pump or iron box, was the reason for the electric shock," the judge said.

The judge stated that in these circumstances, in absence of such evidence, the court cannot draw an inference regarding existence of culpability in respect of knowledge. The more stringent charge can only be invoked if there's knowledge.

CAN A SMARTWATCH PREDICT YOUR CARDIAC HEALTH?

Smartwatches are great for tracking essential health metrics, especially in the case of heart conditions. Cardiologists have started recommending them as screening tools, with their smart features acting like on-the-spot ECGs to detect rhythm disorders early. So, are smartwatches accurate indicators of cardiac health?
