Italy's Iveco scouting for partners in CV segment

ITALIAN TRUCK MAKER Iveco Group will be tapping oppor tunities in the Indian commer cial vehicles market through cial vehicles market through partnerships and sees a win-dow of opportunity opening with the growing interest in the alternate fuel segment in the country's CV market. Gerrit Marx, Global CEO, Iveco Group, said they had no plans at this stage to bring Iveco trucks to India. It is avery competitive mar-plans at this stage to bring leveo trucks to India. It is a very competitive market, yet the window of opportunity would only open with new energy, new propulsion, electric and hydrogen, Marx said. The company may consider entering the truck market in India at the right point of time with partners, he said. The tie-upwith Blue Energy Motors for supplying Liquified Natural Gas (LNG) engines was a step in that direction, Marx said. Blue Energy Motors launched India's first greenfuelled truck and handed over the first set of LNG trucks to two cement companies (IK Cement and Dalmia Cement) on Monday.

For now, Iveco was content with supplying engines and

For now, Iveco was content with supplying engines and powertrain to the Indian parters, who were deeply localised and were better positioned to ap the emerging market opportunity. They were also pursuing other businesses in India in the agriculture and construction segment.

I veco was looking at outsmarting and outpacing much larger competitors, whom they could not outspend, Marxsaid.

Iveco would be participating in the Indian on-road, off-road CV market segment through its powertrain company, FPT Industrial. They will be shipping completely built engines from Italy to India. FPT has been supplying tractor engines to several companies of renewing this licensing agreement with CNH and also freme with the companies of the compani

The shift to LNG takes a few years and it takes time as truck companies want to see that it works and try it out for 15-18 months and once they are convinced they immediately scale up, he said.
