● CHINA'S NEW LAW

Xi now has power to shut down tech firms

New data security regime gives Prez power to fine tech cos as part of drive to wrest control of vast reams of data held by the giants

BLOOMBERG
June 11

CHINA'S NEW DATA security regime gives President Xi Jinping the power to shut down or fine tech companies as part of his drive to wrest control of vast reams of data held by giants like Alibaba Group and Tencent.

Firms found mishandling "core state data" can be forced to cease operations, have their operating licences revoked or fined up to 10 million yuan ($1.6 million) under a law passed Thursday by the Asian nation's top legislative body.

Companies that leak sensitive data abroad can be hit with similar fines and punishments, and those providing economic information to overseas law enforcement bodies without permission can face financial penalties up to 5 million yuan and business suspensions, according to the law published on the website of the National People's Congress.

The law which goes into effect September 1, stipulates that major decisions involving data security will be made by central national security officials. Xi's administration has tightened control over the hoard of information produced by the nation's tech companies as part of broader efforts to position China as a leader in big data. Beijing has been pouring money into data centers and other digital infrastructure to make electronic information a national economic driver and help shore up the Communist Party's legitimacy.

The law represents "another

Xi's administration has tightened control over the hoard of information produced by the nation's tech companies as part of broader efforts to position China as a leader in big data important piece in the overall data protection regulatory jigsaw in China," Carolyn Biggs, a lawyer who specializes in intellectual property and technology issues with DLA Piper in Hong Kong, said before it was passed. Companies will still need to wait for guidance and technical standards on the practical measures they must take to comply, she said. "It remains a complex and increasingly onerous compliance framework for international businesses to navigate through," Biggs said.

Chinese tech stocks were mixed Friday. Alibaba fell 1.2% and Tencent slipped 0.8% at the close in Hong Kong, while Meituan advanced 3.1%. A sub-bag of tech shares on the CSI 300 Index of key firms listed in Shanghai and Shenzhen dropped 1.5%, among the worst performers.

China's digital economy grew much faster than gross domestic product in 2019, according to the Chinese Academy of Information and Communications Technology. The country will hold about one-third of global data by 2025—about 60% more than the US—market research firm IDC projects. The new data laws expected to provide a broad framework for future rules on internet services, and to ring-fence, prize open and ease tracking of valuable data in the interests of national security. Among those may be guidelines on how certain types of data must be stored and handled locally, and requirements on companies to keep track of and report the information they possess.

The NPC is also drafting personal information protection legislation that is expected to be adopted this year. China's push parallels debates in the US, where lawmakers have called for breaking up internet titans like Facebook Inc. and Alphabet Inc., and in Europe, where regulators have prioritized anti-trust actions and giving users more control over data. President Joe Biden ordered a security review of foreign software applications Wednesday after revoking Trump administration bans on the Chinese-owned apps TikTok and WeChat that had faced opposition in US courts.

Hong Kong, June 11

The top US diplomat in Hong Kong said the imposition of a new national security law had created an "atmosphere of tension" that threatens both the city's freedoms and its standing as an international business hub.

In unusually strident remarks to Reuters this week, US consul-general Hanscom Smith called it "appalling" that Beijing's initiative had "viti-fied" routine diplomatic activities such as meeting local activists, part of a government crackdown on foreign forces that was "casting a pall over the

What the world wants China to disclose in Wuhan lab leak probe

KWAN WEI KEVIN TAN
& JASON GALE
June 11

THE US PUSH for a new inquiry to determine the origins of the coronavirus—including whether it leaked from a Wuhan lab—raises a key question: What has China failed to disclose?

The Group of Seven leaders this weekend are set to call for a fresh, transparent, World Health Organization-convened study into the origins of this virus, according to a draft statement issued by Bloomberg News. Yet so far they've been vague on what exactly they want.

In his statement giving intelligence agencies 90 days to redouble efforts into the origin of Covid-19, President Joe Biden asked them to come up with "specific questions for China." Beijing officials have repeatedly denied that the virus leaked from the lab, and pointed to a WHO report earlier this year that said the most likely origin was natural.

MURKY AFFAIR

Beijing officials have repeatedly denied that the virus leaked from the lab, and pointed to a WHO report earlier this year that said the most likely origin was natural September 2019. The European Union similarly called for more data.

One big outstanding question is what type of work was actually going on in the Wuhan Institute of Virology. Shi Zhengli, the top lab coronavirus researcher at the lab, said in a March 2020 article in Scientific American that the genetic code of the virus that causes Covid-19 doesn't match any of her lab's samples. She told the WHO team that all staff had tested negative for Covid-19 antibodies.

Still, researchers haven't yet had access to all coronavirus isolates and genomic sequence data held at Wuhan labs. And they haven't had access to log books and records of the research that was being conducted on coronaviruses, in particular viruses with the RaTG13 lab sequence that is similar to posed the law. Critics of the legislation say the law has crushed the city's democratic opposition, civil society and Western-style freedoms.

The foreign forces issue is at the heart of the crimes of "collusion" with foreign countries or "external elements" detailed in Article 29 of the security law, scholars say.

Article 29 outlaws a range of direct or indirect links with a "foreign country or an institution, organisation or individual" outside greater China, covering offences from the stealing of secrets and waging war to engaging in "hostile activities" and "provoking hatred." They can be punished by up to life in prison. "People...don't know where the red lines are, and it creates an atmosphere that's not just bad for fundamental freedoms, it's bad for business," Smith said.

"You can't have it both ways," he added. "You can't purport to be this global hub and at the same time invoke this kind of propaganda language criticising foreigners."

Smith is a career US foreign service officer who has deep experience in China and the wider region, serving in Shanghai, Beijing and Taiwan before arriving in Hong Kong in July 2019. He made his comments in an interview at the US diplomatic mission in Hong Kong on Wednesday after Reuters sought the consulate's views on the impact of the national security law.

In a response to Reuters, Hong Kong's Security Bureau said "normal interactions and activities" were protected, and blamed external elements for interfering in the city during the protests that engulfed Hong Kong in 2019.

"There are indications in investigations and intelligence that foreign intervention was rampant with money, supplies and other forms of support," a representative said. He did not identify specific individuals or groups.

Tokyo Olympics still undecided on fans — or no fans at all

Tokyo, June 11

THE QUESTION OF allowing any fans into Tokyo Olympic venues is still being debated with a decision unlikely to be announced before the end of the month.

This would be just a few weeks before the Olympics are to open on July 23. Fans from abroad have already been banned in what is shaping up as a largely made-for-television Olympics. Tokyo and several prefectures are under a state of emergency until June 20. Infections have slowed recently, but the spread of variants is still a concern that could put pressure on already stressed medical facilities.

Dr Nobuhiko Okabe, director general of the Kawasaki City Institute for Public Health, suggested on Friday he would lean toward fans. He spoke on a panel put together by the Tokyo Olympic organising committee. "Thinking in a different way, I think it's an option to suggest to people to enjoy the games on TV—like teleworking," he said. "We could suggest a different way of enjoying the games. Okabe said it was not just a matter of fans in the venues, but what they do after leaving—heading to bars or restaurants.

"We don't want people to move much," he said. "That's our wish as we think about anti-virus measures." Organising committee president Seiko Hashimoto originally said she would announce a decision in April about local fans but has repeatedly postponed it. Ticket sales were to account for $800 million in income for the organising committee. Much of that will be lost and has to be made up by Japanese government entities.

Japan is officially spending $15.4 billion to run the Olympics, though government audits suggest the figure is much higher. All but $6.7 billion is public money.

The Switzerland-based International Olympic Committee derives almost 75% of its income from selling broadcast rights, which drives the games and the urgency to hold it during a pandemic. —AP

US sanctions Indian of Iranian sanctions

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
Washington, June 11

THE US HAS imposed sanctions on a UAE-based Indian national for helping to set up a smuggling network that it says was cooperating with Iran's Revolutionary Guard to illicitly transfer tens of millions of dollars to Yemen's Houthi rebels.

Manoj Sabharwal is part of a smuggling network that helps fund Iran's Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps-Qods Force (IRGC-QF) and the Houthis in Yemen, the Department of Treasury said. Led by Iranian-based Houthi financier Said al-Jamal, this network generates tens of millions of dollars in revenue from the sale of commodities, like Iranian petroleum, a significant portion of which is then directed through a complex network of intermediaries and exchange houses in multiple countries to the Houthis in Yemen, the US added.

The Treasury said Sabharwal is a maritime shipping professional who manages shipping operations for Said al-Jamal's network and advises al-Jamal on smuggling Iranian oil products.
