Covid-19 vaccination drive boosts syringe demand

SHINI DAS

With vaccine production picking up, the demand for syringes has shot through the roof. Leading syringe maker Hindustan Syringes & Medical Devices (HMD) feels demand may soon outstrip supply.

MANUFACTURING CAPACITY PER MONTH

For instance, the Serum Institute of India is now manufacturing 150 million doses of the Covaxin/Ad26 vaccine developed in partnership with the Government of India. In comparison, HMD makes 50 million auto-injectable (AI) syringes monthly.

capacity is 3 billion syringes. Nandi plans to take the AD syringe capacity to 1.2 billion by March 2022. He also plans to take the disposable syringe capacity from 2 billion to 3.5 billion by next year.

Industry sources claim the Centre is looking to procure around 1 billion syringes between September and December to support the vaccination drive. However, anticipating that the supplies of AD syringes could be stretched, the government has also floated tenders to procure disposable syringes.

needle. Low-leak space syringes are designed to minimise bleed-through and with it, waste.

The pressing need for low-leak space syringes is relatively new. The specialised syringes are considered a niche product, used when dealing with drugs like fertility treatments, where medication waste can be especially costly.

Jain feels that supplies will remain adequate for the Covid-19 vaccination drive.

Demand for syringes for non-Covid vaccination has also picked up. Of the 100-million disposable syringe capacity (TMD) had last year, the utilisation was around 50-60 per cent. This has now gone up to 100 per cent. HMD is also adding a new plant to make steel tubes and cannulae that are components to make needles. The firm has invested ₹100 crore in the last one year, and plans to invest another ₹50 crore.

Arvind Fashions narrows focus to branded apparel

ANVI UMARI

Even as it raises funds to diversify and exit brands and businesses to focus on only six marquee brands, Arvind Fashions (AFL) is back to doing what it does best — branded apparel.

While power brands included US Polo Association, Arrow, Flying Machine, and Tommy Hilfiker, emerging ones included Calvin Klein, Aeropostale and Ed Hardy.

Along with specialty retail like Unlimted (erstwhile Megamart), GAP and Sephora, it was operating over 1,400 stores in FY19. Unlimted also sold its private brands like Newport, Rui & Yui, Excubiter and Ruggers. Earlier, it had brands like GANT, Nautica, Hanes, and Izod, among others. However, branded apparel and retail experts like Anvi Umari, founder and managing director Haminder Sahni pointed out that it resulted in AFL trying to do too many things at the same time.

Running apparel brands, retail and e-commerce are different from each other. The company was not only into multiple brands but also engaged in value-retail business like Unlimted, as well as trying to build its own e-commerce platform.

According to Shailesh Chaturvedi, CEO, Arvind Fashions, each of the six brands carry their own consumer equity and have the potential to grow up market towns from where the company's next phase of growth is expected. "Our data shows traction in smaller towns, which is why we are making efforts and accelerating store opening from 100 to 200 annually in these towns," Chaturvedi said.
