Trump's top China envoy to leave Beijing for campaign

China said it hadn't yet received any formal notification on the issue

BLOOMBERG
Beijing/Washington,
September 14

SECRETARY OF STATE

Michael Pompeo thanked Ambassador to China Terry Branstad for his service, appearing to confirm President Donald Trump's earlier remarks that US's top diplomat was leaving Beijing for the campaign trail.

In a series of tweets, Pompeo praised Branstad's contribution to "rebalancing" the US's relationship with China. Still, the secretary stopped short of saying explicitly whether Branstad was continuing in the high-profile diplomatic post, which he has held since the first months of Trump's presidency. CNN separately reported that Branstad had resigned, citing a person familiar with the matter.

I thank Ambassador Terry Branstad for his more than three years of service to the American people as US Ambassador to the People's Republic of China.

The US Embassy in Beijing didn't immediately respond to a request for comment Monday. Chinese Foreign Ministry spokesman Wang Wenbin told a regular news briefing that the government hadn't yet received any formal notification that Branstad was departing. "Bransad's departure would be a loss to China-US diplomacy as it would mean one less political heavyweight with a deep understanding of China based here," said Wang Huiyao, an adviser to China's cabinet and founder of the Center for China and Globalization. "My impression of Branstad from being at the same events is that he is someone who actively tried to ease China-US tensions. His departure would be a loss to furthering bilateral relations."

Over the weekend, Trump had said Branstad would return to the US while praising the campaign efforts of the ambassador's son, Eric Branstad.

"Eric's father's coming home from China because he wants to campaign," Trump said, in a phone call with supporters of US Senator Joni Ernst, a Republican whose close re-election battle in Iowa could help determine control of the upper house.

Russian opposition leader Navalny able to leave his bed

ASSOCIATED PRESS
Berlin

RUSSIAN OPPOSITION LEADER Alexei Navalny's health has improved so that he is now able to leave his bed briefly, the Berlin hospital treating him said Monday, while Germany announced that French and Swedish labs have confirmed its findings that he was poisoned with the Soviet-era nerve agent Novichok.

Navalny, the most prominent opponent of Russian President Vladimir Putin, was flown to Germany two days after falling ill on August 20 on a domestic flight in Russia and is being treated at Berlin's Charite hospital. Berlin has demanded that Russia investigate the case.

The Charite said Navalny has now been "successfully removed from mechanical ventilation."

"He is currently undergoing mobilisation and is able to leave his bed for short periods of time," it added. Monday's statement didn't address the long-term outlook for the 44-year-old Russian politician and anti-corruption investigator. Doctors have cautioned that even though Navalny is recovering well, long-term health problems from the poisoning cannot be ruled out.

Navalny, the most prominent opponent of Russian President Vladimir Putin, was flown to Germany two days after falling ill on August 20

The Kremlin has bristled at calls from German Chancellor Angela Merkel and other world leaders for Russia to answer questions about the poisoning, denying any official involvement and accusing the West of trying to smear Moscow. Earlier Monday, the German government said tests by labs in France and Sweden had backed up earlier findings by a German military lab that Navalny was poisoned with Novichok, the same class of Soviet-era agent that British authorities said was used on former Russian spy Sergei Skripal and his daughter.

China warns US over economic talks with Taiwan this week

ASSOCIATED PRESS
Taipei

CHINA WARNED THE United States on Monday of potential "serious damage" to their relations if it does not withdraw from an upcoming economic meeting with Taiwan that is expected to be attended by a senior American official.

Chinese foreign ministry spokesman Wang Wenbin urged the US at a daily briefing to "stop all forms of official exchanges with Taiwan, so as to avoid serious damage to China-US relations and peace and stability across the Taiwan Strait."

Taiwanese media reported that US Under Secretary of State for Economic Growth, Energy, and the Environment Keith Krach is planning to visit the island later this week for an economic and commercial dialogue with Taiwan's government.

The visit would follow one by US Health Secretary Alex Azar last month. Azar was the highest-level US Cabinet official to visit since a break in formal ties between the US and Taiwanese government in 1979, when the US accepted a "one-China policy" with Beijing as its government. A visit by Krach is likely to inspire further anger from China. China considers self-ruled Taiwan part of its own territory, and strongly opposes any official contacts between other nations and the island.

Taiwan's Ministry of Foreign Affairs confirmed last week that it was in negotiations with the US on such talks, but did not comment on a specific date or who might attend from Washington.

Tensions are high between the US and China over issues including trade, cybersecurity, technology and Hong Kong's new national security law. Relations have deteriorated further since the coronavirus outbreak.

Trump blames China for the pandemic

China's billion-tree project is a green lesson for the world

BLOOMBERG
September 14

FEW ENVIRONMENTAL CAMPAIGNS in China have been so enthusiastically pursued or so controversial as its Great Green Wall.

Every spring, government officials, teachers, students, and company employees go on group tree-planting trips. State media single out forest workers for praise. Film stars line up to be "tree-planting ambassadors." It's a campaign in the vein of the old Communist propaganda drives - the workers uniting to dominate the forces of nature. March 12 is National Tree-Planting Day.

Launched in 1978 to protect the north, northwest, and northeast, three regions affected by sandstorms sweeping out of the Gobi Desert, the so-called "Three-North Shelter Forest Program" aimed to grow 35 million hectares (87 million acres) of new trees - a forest the size of Germany - across the country's north by 2050. In the ensuing four decades, planting trees became one of both the private and public sectors' favourite climate change solutions. That makes the fate of China's sprawling man-made forests a key early indicator for how these other projects may fare.

The programme was beset by problems from the start because of poor planning, the unrealistic demands of local party cadres, and a poor understanding of how and where a forest can successfully grow.

"We were told of the importance of planting trees at a very young age," says Sun Jing, director of the Alashan Foundation, a Chinese charity that combats desertification. "The idea that more trees equals good is never challenged."

While the mission was designed to take 72 years, local officials wanted results quickly, so the vast majority of the trees planted were fast-growing poplars that could withstand the region's cold, dry winters.

By the 1990s huge numbers of them started dying, victims of the Asian longhorn beetle, which loves softwoods, including poplars.

Wildfires raise fight over climate before Trump visit

ASSOCIATED PRESS
Beavercreek, September 14

WITH CREWS BATTLING wildfires that have killed at least 33 people, destroyed neighbourhoods and enveloped the West Coast in smoke, another fight has emerged: leaders in the Democratic-led states and President Donald Trump have clashed over the role of climate change ahead of his visit Monday to California.

California, Oregon and Washington state have seen historic wildfires that have burned faster and farther than ever before.

Numerous studies in recent years have linked bigger wildfires in the US to global warming from the burning of coal, oil and gas.
