Big Tech's eco-pledges aren't slowing its pursuit of Big Oil

Tech giants have been competing with one another to strike lucrative partnerships with ExxonMobil, Chevron, Shell, BP and other energy firms

MATT O'BRIEN October 2

EMPLOYEE ACTIVISM AND

Under pressure have pushed big tech companies like Amazon, Microsoft and Google into promising to slash their carbon emissions. But there's another thing these tech giants aren't cutting: Their growing business ties to the oil and gas industry.

Microsoft CEO Satya Nadella

Microsoft CEO Satya Nadella has also announced intelligence tools for pinpointing better drilling spots or speeding up refinery production. The oil and gas industry is spending roughly $20 billion each year on cloud services, which accounts for about 10% of the total cloud market, according to Vivek Chidambaram, a managing director of Accenture's energy consultancy. It's not yet clear whether the extraction industry is getting its money's worth, although experts remain bullish about the application of advanced technology to oil and gas exploration.

US Fed charts own path to fight climate change operates more independently from the White House than Cabinet agencies. While the Fed's Washington-based Board of Governors is part of the federal government, its governors serve 14-years terms, outlasting any one president. The system's 12 regional Fed banks are privately owned by local financial institutions, and operate under the board's supervision. —BLOOMBERG and United Nations climate action meetings angered some environmentally-minded Microsoft workers and caught the attention of outsiders. Echoing that message was a small group of Microsoft employees who carried cardboard signs to a lunchtime protest that day outside of Microsoft's headquarters in Redmond, Washington. "No Azure For Oil," said one of the signs. After months of employee activism, Amazon CEO Jeff Bezos said he was pushing his company to the forefront on sustainability, committing it to have 100% of its energy come from solar panels and other renewable energy by 2030.

But he also defended Amazon's work with the oil and gas industry, arguing that "we need to help them instead of vilify them." Some experts say AI and cloud services could actually play a role in curbing emissions. Deploying cloud computing services to the oil and gas industry would do little to address the bigger problem of the world's ongoing dependence on fossil fuels, said Assem Prakash, director of the Center for Environmental Politics at the University of Washington. —AP

Huawei's bootleg route to Google apps blocked

VLAD SAVOV Tokyo, October 2

ONE OF HUAWEI'S biggest trade war headaches has just got worse, as an unofficial workaround to the Trump administration ban on using Google apps and services has been quashed. Security researcher John Wu published an illuminating post Tuesday that explained how users of Huawei's Mate 30 Pro were able to manually download and install Google apps, despite a US blacklisting that prohibits the Chinese company from using American components and software. The process allowed the Mate 30 Pro along with the basic Mate 30 to run popular apps like Google Maps and Gmail that otherwise would not be permitted. In the wake of Wu's revelations, the Mate 30 devices lost their clearance to manually install Android apps, as reported by a number of smartphone experts. Only Google is able to make that kind of change through what's known as its SafetyNet anti-backdoor

"Although this 'backdoor' requires user interaction to be enabled, the installer, which is signed with a special certificate from Huawei, was granted privileges nowhere to be found on standard Android systems," Wu wrote on Medium. —BLOOMBERG
