AHEAD OF PSU'S PRIVATISATION Half of RINL land to be kept aside

Around 9,000 acres of the excess land to be separated out of 19,730 acres in its possession

SURYA SARATHI RAY New Delhi, April 18

AROUND 9,000 ACRES of the excess land with state-run Rashtriya Ispat Nigam (RINL) may be separated from the entity before it is put up for sale.

The government expects participation from all major domestic steel firms and a couple of international players as the privatisation process for the 7.3 million tonne per annum (mtpa) port-based unit located in upmarket Visakha-

THE INDIAN SEMICONDUC-

Further, due to government initiatives to promote semiconpatnam is about to begin. Currently, RINL has 19,730 acres in its possession. The plant is located on around 11,000 acres and is sufficient to take the plant capacity to around 11 mtpa.

Steel firms looking to expand capacity, particularly in long products, may find the port-based unit attractive, said a senior government official.

The plant has also staged a turnaround in 2021-22. After incurring losses in the previous two fiscals, RINL has earned a ₹835-crore profit before tax (PBT) in FY22 on a turnover of ₹28,082 crore, its bestever. During the year, it also recorded a highest-ever saleable steel production at 5.14 MT since the plant started operations in 1992.

However, RINL has given around 2,000 acres on lease to various agencies, including the railways, the Andhra Pradesh government for Gangavaram Port and the National HighwaysAuthority of India (NHAI). On January 27 last year, the Cabinet Committee on Economic Affairs (CCEA) accorded an 'in-principle' approval for 100% disinvestment of the government's shareholding in RINL along with its stake in subsidiaries and joint ventures through a strategic disinvestment by way of privatisation.

Though there has been a stiff resistance by the trade unions and the state government, the Centre seems determined to carry out the process as it would lead to capital infusion, capacity expansion, infusion of appropriate technology and better management practices with resultant higher production and productivity.

The Centre has already invited bids from valuers as part of the privatisation process for RINL.

As RINL does not have any captive iron ore mine, steel ministry has approached Odisha, Chhattisgarh and Andhra Pradesh governments for granting iron ore blocks on nomination basis. RINL has also been participating inallocation of iron ore mines through the e-auction route.

Q-commerce: Long on funding, short on unit economics?

Analysts that FE spoke with say that though there is a large enough total addressable market (TAM) for q-commerce, it is unclear as to whether there is a market opportunity for all the major players to co-exist. This situation is reminiscent of the early boom of the food delivery segment in India which started with around 4-5 players and eventually narrowed into a duopoly (Swiggy and Zomato).

"There is a market potential for g-commerce, however, it will bethe survival of the fittest. Currently, most of the g-commerce companies are focussed on groceries which is traditionally a low margin business. The way forward will be further diversification into other segments like medicines and even basic electronicaccessories to expand the SKU base. However, these companies are burning cash right now due to extensive advertising and discounts being offered to onboard the customers. But over a period of time, they have to make sure that the model turns profitable. Managing effective supply chains will be the key to success," Naveen Malpani, partner and consumer sector leader, Grant Thornton said in an interview.

The players are, however, depend on these apps for unplanned spot purchases quiteupbeat.Zepto's co-founder and CEO Aadit Palichasaid there rather than using them for were clear advantages in the groweekly bulk purchases. Palicha added that the some concerns remain on the customer retention for the foruniteconomic front. Consultancy firm Red Seer's estimates show that q-commerce currently has a total addressable market (TAM) of around $45 billion mostly in just metro and Tier-1 cities where mid- to high-income household penetration is the highest. This translates to around 20 million households in the country. But, evidently, qcommerce users aren't loyal users, since a majority of the users are discount hunters, and ket.But the challenge is that ecommerce app orders have an additional cost as capex for managing the physical store itself, and the cost of paying salary to ground staff managing the store. So roughly, a store that stock 800-1000 SKUs can breakeven at ₹50 lakh GMV sales per month," a product management executive at q-commerce delivery firm said. However, analysts say that these start-ups are missing out on developing better unit economics since a majority of them have ignored the massive distribution capacity of local kiranas and supermarkets, which could in turn, double up as warehouses. With deploying their own dark stores, g-commerce apps are also now a direct competition to kiranas. "There is still a sizeable population in India who will still refer to buy groceries by having a look and feel for the product, which only a kirana can support. Whilst the kirana stores are feeling the heat of qcommerce, they are also adopting basic technologies like WhatsApp and online payment platforms...and will give stiff competition to all the gcommerce companies. Some of the q-commerce companies are actually onboarding local kirana stores so that they can manage the deliveries and they don't have to maintain dark stores everywhere, which is a more economically viable option. But still, there is currently a market for both the models," Malpani of Grant Thornton added.
