GERMANY, UK SEEK RESET IN BILATERAL TIES

BRITAIN AND GERMANY'S leaders agreed in Berlin on Wednesday to work on an ambitious treaty covering issues from defence to trade that would be part of a reset of British relations with the European Union.

BUFFETT SELLS BOFA SHARES WORTH $982 MN

BILLIONAIRE WARREN BUFFETT'S Berkshire Hathaway has sold some more shares of Bank of America over the past few days, raking in $981.9 million, as the conglomerate continues to trim down its stake in the second-largest US lender. Berkshire has now shed about $5.4 billion worth of Bank of America shares in a string of sales since mid-July.

EV MAKER BYD POSTS 33% PROFIT RISE

CHINESE ELECTRIC VEHICLE maker BYD reported a 32.8% rise in second-quarter net profit on Wednesday, its fastest growth since end-2023, despite faltering spending on big-ticket items in the world's largest automobile market. Net profit hit 9.1 billion yuan ($1.3 billion) in the April-June quarter, while revenue was up 25.9% from a year earlier at 176.2 billion yuan, it said in a stock exchange filing.

SONY LIFTS PLAYSTATION PRICES BY 19%

SONY GROUP IS raising the price of its marquee gaming console by about 19% to nearly $550 in Japan, one of the most dramatic signs that Asia's No 2 economy is emerging from a deflationary cycle. Sony suggested a new price of ¥79,980 for its PlayStation 5, effective September 2.

Silicon Valley's wish list for Harris: Abortion rights, pro-tech policies

JEFFREY DASTIN
San Francisco, August 28

VENTURE CAPITALISTS PLEDGING support for Kamala Harris' White House campaign listed priorities in a survey released on Wednesday that include women's reproductive rights, climate change and a friendlier stance toward startups. Of about 800 venture capitalists who signed an open letter of support, 225 chose to detail their reasons for endorsing the Democratic candidate and the policies they favour in a survey being reported first by Reuters.

Nearly all of the 225 thought it was a mistake for the Supreme Court to overturn Roe v Wade, which recognised abortion rights. Some felt that hurt women at work. "These are not social issues. These are actually business issues," said Leslie Feinzaig, CEO of Graham & Walker who started the pledge. Investors and executives said they viewed Vice President Harris, a Californian with ties to Silicon Valley, as a tech-savvy candidate open to engaging with industry. They voiced nostalgia for the Obama White House, which a decade ago recruited from and lauded the technology sector. Politicians in Washington have since taken a more critical tone. The open letter, called "VCs for Kamala" and disclosed in July, includes such venture capitalists as Reid Hoffman from Greylock and Vinod Khosla from Khosla Ventures. The 225 who filled out the survey did so anonymously. They were 62% men, 66% white, largely aged 35 to 64. Although no one was asked to provide party affiliation, among those who self-disclosed, 70% were Democrats and 30% were Republicans or independents, the poll organisers said. Some 97% wanted leaders who are "knowledgeable about technologies like AI and crypto to build effective regulations," and nearly 92% believed the US government needs to hire more technology talent, the survey results showed. Reuters also interviewed entrepreneurs outside the scope of the investor-focused survey to look at what Harris' Silicon Valley supporters wanted more broadly. Regarding AI, "We need the smartest people in government who know what to do on the military and civilian side, who know what's coming," said Eric Ries, an entrepreneur and author of "The Lean Startup." The United States has lagged Europe in passing comprehensive AI legislation, though President Joe Biden issued an executive order last year requiring AI developers to report safety tests when there are security or health risks. —REUTERS

Apple cuts 100 jobs in digital services group

SERVICES HAVE BECOME INCREASINGLY VITAL TO APPLE SALES

They accounted for more than 22% of revenue in fiscal 2023

APPLE TOOK THE rare step of cutting about 100 jobs in its digital services group, part of a shift in priorities for the critical division, according to people with knowledge of the matter. The company informed the affected employees, who worked across several different teams in senior vice president Eddy Cue's services group, on Tuesday, said the people, who asked not to be identified. The layoffs included some engineering roles, and the biggest cuts were made to the team responsible for the Apple Books app and Apple Bookstore. There were also layoffs in other services teams, including the one that runs Apple News. Apple Books has become less of a priority for the company, which doesn't see it as a major part of its services lineup. The Books app is still expected to get new features over time, according to the people. As for Apple News, the layoffs aren't a sign that it's becoming less of a focus, they said. Layoffs are relatively rare at Apple, though the company has made at least four rounds of reductions in 2024. Earlier this year, it laid off hundreds of workers when it shuttered its self-driving car project as well as an effort to make microLED displays. It also closed down a team in San Diego. —BLOOMBERG

Telegram CEO Durov freed from police custody, will appear in court

FRENCH PROSECUTORS ON Wednesday freed Telegram CEO Pavel Durov from police custody after four days of questioning over allegations that the messaging app is being used for illegal activities. Durov was detained on Saturday at Le Bourget airport outside Paris as part of a judicial inquiry opened last month involving 12 alleged criminal violations. "An investigating judge has ended Pavel Durov's police custody and will have him brought to court for a first appearance and a possible indictment," a statement from the Paris prosecutor's office said. Allegations against the Russia-born Durov, who is a French

Durov's arrest has caused outrage in Russia, with some govt officials calling it politically motivated and that Telegram refused to share information or documents with investigators when required by law. Durov's arrest in France has caused outrage in Russia, with some government officials calling it politically motivated and proof of the West's double standard on freedom of speech. The outcry has raised eyebrows among Kremlin critics because in 2018, Russian authorities themselves tried to block Telegram app but failed, withdrawing the ban in 2020. In Iran, where Telegram is widely used despite being officially banned after years of protests challenging the country's Shiite theocracy, Durov's arrest in France prompted comments from the Islamic Republic's supreme leader. Ayatollah Ali Khamenei weighed in with veiled praise for France for being "strict" against those who "violate your governance" of the internet. French President Emmanuel Macron said Monday that Durov's arrest wasn't a political move but part of an independent investigation. Macron posted on X that his country "is deeply committed" to freedom of expression but "freedoms are upheld within a legal framework, both on social media and in real life, to protect citizens and respect their fundamental rights." —AP

Bangladesh's interim govt lifts ban on Jamaat-e-Islami

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
Dhaka, August 28

BANGLADESH'S INTERIM GOVERNMENT on Wednesday revoked a ban on the right wing Jamaat-e-Islami and its student wing Islami Chhatra Shibir, less than a month after it was imposed on the Islamist party by former prime minister Sheikh Hasina, who was forced to resign following massive protests against her government. "It (lifting the ban) will come under effect immediately," the home ministry said in a gazette notification, noting that there was no particular evidence against the organisation. The erstwhile Awami

League government led by Hasina had imposed a ban on Jamaat on August 1, 2024, accusing the Islamist party as a "militant and terrorist" organisation. The government blamed Jamaat's student wing for inciting chaos over a quota system for government jobs. The notification said the ban under the Anti-Terrorism Act 2009 has been lifted as there was no particular evidence against the organisation. The government believed that Jamaat and its associate bodies, including its student front Chhatra Shibir, were not involved in terrorist activities and violence. The decision, formally published in a gazette notification on Wednesday, represents a significant change from the decision taken by the erstwhile Awami League government earlier this month, just days before its ouster. The development came a day after Attorney General Mohammad Asaduzzaman urged the High Court to summarily reject a writ petition seeking an order on the government to ban Hasina's Awami League as a political party and scrap its registration.

Tesla's rivals still cannot use its EV superchargers

JACK EWING
August 28

SCARCE AND FINICKY public chargers are among the biggest reasons people hesitate to buy electric cars. So when Elon Musk, the chief executive of Tesla, agreed last year to open the company's well-regarded Supercharger network to vehicles from other carmakers, many drivers and industry experts celebrated the decision.

But more than 12 months later, Tesla's network, with nearly 30,000 fast-charging plugs in the United States and Canada, remains largely inaccessible to most people who don't drive Teslas because of software delays and hardware shortages. The delays have fueled speculation that Musk was having second thoughts about opening up Tesla's network, possibly because he was worried that access would help other automakers sell battery-powered models and lure customers from Tesla, which has suffered from declining sales. Tesla eased those fears a bit on Friday when the company's charging unit posted on X that it had stepped up production of a crucial piece of hardware: adapters that drivers of Ford, Rivian and other car brands need to connect to Tesla chargers. A Tesla factory in Buffalo is producing 8,000 of the adapters per week, the company said, noting that outside suppliers are also producing the part. Still, it is unclear how fast those adapters would reach electric vehicle owners. Tesla did not respond to a request for comment, and the other automakers have been reluctant to speak in detail, apparently because they do not want to antagonise Tesla and Musk. The slow rollout raises questions about the decision that almost all major carmakers operating in the United States made to abandon the Combined Charging System, the standard that most of them used previously, and adopt the North American Charging Standard developed by Tesla. The switch made them vulnerable to the whims of Musk, who frequently changes corporate strategy and tactics in ways that can surprise even his employees and supporters. Tesla built the Supercharger network to encourage sales of its own vehicles. By opening up the network, Tesla can make money from drivers of other car brands, who pay per kilowatt-hour to charge. The electric car company also makes money from selling adapters to other automakers. But Tesla risks alienating its own customers, who will lose exclusive access to the chargers. Tesla's opening up of its chargers to other automakers was meant to be a three-stage process. First, Tesla and each automaker would update the software on Tesla's chargers and the other company's cars so they could work with each other. Second, Tesla would make and supply adapters to allow other cars to connect to its chargers, which use different plugs. The final step is supposed to happen next year, when most automakers plan to start installing Tesla plugs on the new cars they assemble, eliminating the need for an adapter. So far only two car companies have advanced past the first stage with Tesla — Ford Motor and Rivian. General Motors had said it expected to complete the software coordination with Tesla this spring but now says it will happen later this year. Other automakers are expected to follow GM. —NYT

Hyundai announces buyback, to double hybrid lineup

HYUNDAI MOTOR PLANS to double its lineup of hybrid cars as demand for pure electric vehicles slows, and announced a 4 trillion won ($3 billion) share buyback as part of a plan to boost investor returns.

Unveiling a new strategy at its 2024 investor day on Wednesday, the world's third-biggest carmaker said it will increase the number of hybrids in its lineup to 14 — moving beyond compact and mid-size cars to add large and luxury vehicles. However, it kept its EV sales target unchanged at 2 million a year by 2030. Hyundai shares jumped as much as 5.5% in Seoul trading on Wednesday and closed up 4.7% as investors welcomed the buyback and the company's commitment to pay a minimum annual dividend of 10,000 won a share — the key planks in a strategy to target a total shareholder return of 35% from 2025 to 2027. "The shareholder return, which is the key interest of investors, is particularly impressive," said James Hong, an analyst at Macquarie Securities Korea. "Overall, it beat market expectations," he said, adding that the 4 trillion won share buyback over three years was bigger than expected. The move to accelerate the production of hybrids comes amid a broad slowdown in EV demand globally. Ford Motor, Porsche and Mercedes-Benz Group have all walked back their EV ambitions in recent months, while Tesla is well off the pace of 1.8 million cars sold last year. —BLOOMBERG
