Inflated claim can lead to zero compensation

Commission held

CONSUMER PROTECTION

JEHANGIR B GAI

Robina Kumar was the sole proprietress of Balaji Textiles. She had a shop on the first floor, and was engaged in the wholesale business of ladies' suits and clothes.

The firm had availed of cash credit facility of ₹24 lakh from Canara Bank. This required an insurance policy to be taken through the bank, which obtained a Standard Fire and Special Perils Policy from New India Assurance with a coverage of ₹65 lakh, valid from July 29, 2009 to July 28, 2010. The policy covered stock of all types — clothes, suits, dress materials, sarees, etc — lying in the shop.
On the night between October 17 and 18, 2009, a fire The National broke out in the shop. The neighbours informed her that the insurer was husband Ramesh Kumar, justified in refusing who had a shop on the to settle the claim as ground floor of the same the insured had building. Ramesh in turn attempted to informed the Fire Brigade fraudulently inflate which deputed two fire the claim engines. They managed to bring the fire under control with difficulty, after considerable damage had occurred. Both the local police and the insurer were informed. The cause of the fire could not be determined. It was suspected to have occurred due to an electric short circuit originating from the first floor near the generator set.

Robina lodged a claim for the entire sum insured of ₹65 lakh. The surveyor who was appointed demanded several documents to prove the loss. Despite producing the documents, the surveyor kept asking repeatedly for the same documents. So, Robina lodged a complaint with the Insurance Regulatory and Development Authority of India (IRDAI) against the surveyor.

The Surveyor submitted the Final

Survey Report, after which the insured sent an undated discharge voucher worth ₹5,91,128. Robina signed the voucher agreeing to accept the amount as part payment under protest. She also had a legal notice issued for balance claim. The insurer then appointed an investigator, and refused to make any payment whatsoever. Robina then filed a complaint before the Chandigarh State Commission.

The insurer contested the complaint, pointing out that data on stock entered by the accountant in his laptop was not provided even though it had been repeatedly sought. The insurer also pointed out that the claim was inflated as the surveyor had observed that the quantity of stock alleged to have been destroyed was beyond the shop's storage capacity.

The State Commission ordered the insurer to pay ₹59.08.872. New India challenged the order in appeal, pointing out that the State Commission had ignored the investigator's report and findings. Robina also appealed as interest had not been allowed.

The National Commission pointed out that it was the insured's duty to prove the amount of loss suffered. It observed that the data provided by the insured showed a low quantum of sale but a high quantum of purchase. It also relied on the investigator's finding that the volumetric analysis revealed the quantity of goods in the store exceeded its storage capacity. So, it concurred with the view that the claim amount appeared to be inflated.

The Commission also noted that the insurer had subsequently appointed an investigator who had randomly attempted to verify whether the purchase bills were genuine or not, and had found that certain bills were fabricated and fake and were issued by non-existent entities.

In its order of January 12, 2022 delivered by Ram Surat Ram Maurya, the National Commission held that the insurer was justified in refusing to settle the claim as the insured had attempted to fraudulently inflate the claim. Accordingly, it dismissed Robina's complaint.

Cancel policy during free-look period if it is unsuitable

Don't fall prey to pressure from bank to buy mortgage insurance while taking a home loan

ccording to Insurance Regulatory Development Authority of India's (Irdai's) annual report for 2020-21, banks and broker channels received more mis-selling complaints than others. Individual agents, direct selling agents, and corporate agents also indulged in misselling, though to a lesser extent. Here is a look at the ways in which policies are mis-sold, and steps you can take to protect your interests.

Bundling insurance

Sometimes, the banker makes the purchase of insurance a precondition for availing bank services. This most commonly happens at the time of taking a home loan. The bank insists on the purchase of insurance to cover the loan liability.

Dilshad Billimoria, board member, Association of Registered Investment Advisors (ARIA), says, "Sometimes, the bank even adds the premium amount to the loan disbursed. This means you buy insurance with borrowed funds and pay interest on the premium amount. This is definitely not necessary." The home loan borrower should not agree to this.

While it is good to take a cover on the home loan, the borrower is under no obligation to buy a mortgage policy, or buy it from the bank disbursing the loan. No mandatory guidelines exist in this regard. Billimoria says, "A pure term plan is a better option. Compare the options from various providers and then buy. You may even consider a single-premium policy."

Splitting policies This involves splitting a policy

MYRIAD WAYS OF MIS-SELLING

- Life insurance policies sold as tax-saving or investment plans, and not as protection plans, which is their primary purpose
- Churning of policies to earn higher commissions
- Insurance sold to clients not present in India at the time of sourcing; rules stipulate buyer must be present in India
- Tampering, forgery of proposal form and other ■ Sales personnel lack proper

- knowledge, are inadequately trained, and hence recommend unsuitable products
- Charges under the policy, lock-in period not properly explained during the sale of unit-linked insurance plans into multiple policies and selling them to the same proposer at the same time. Pankai Mathpal, managing director and chief executive officer Optima Money Managers, says, "Suppose that a single policy has a premium of₹50.000. The agent persuades you to buy five policies with a premium of ₹10,000 each. He convinces you that in case you face a cash crunch in the future you will be able to afford the premium of at least a few policies."

your best interest. Mathpal says, "Purchasing five policies mium payment product is sold instead of one becomes expensive. You miss out on the discount offered on a larger sum assured. The total premium on multiple policies will also be higher than on a single plan."

Misrepresentation of benefits and obligations

The seller sometimes provides false or misleading information about policy features and benefits. A high-premium policy may be sold in such a way that the buyer doesn't realise the However, splitting isn't in premiums he needs to pay in the future. Often a regular pre-as a single-premium product.

In case of investment-cuminsurance plans, especially, most retail buyers will not be able to calculate the effective rate of return they will earn. Melvyn Joseph, a Sebi-registered investment adviser and founder of Finvin Financial Planners, says, "The layman doesn't understand the jargon or calculations of insurance, especially when the savings element is a part of the plan. Distributors and agents get huge commissions on such savings products." Joseph suggests going for simple, easily understandable products, like term plans.

Ignore traditional plans, such as whole life, endowment, and moneyback policies. The effective rate of return on them is barely 3-4 per cent.

Rejection of cancellation request

Sometimes, salespersons reject a buyer's request for cancellation of the policy during the free-look period. However, sales personnel don't have the authority to take such decisions. The law allows policyholders 15 days as free-look period from the date of receipt of the policy document. It's 30 days in the case of electronic policies and policies sourced through distance mode. During this period, the buyer can cancel the policy and ask for a refund.

Joseph says, "If you get the policy via courier, you have a way to prove the date on which you received the policy. Individual agents, however, pick the policy from the insurer and hand-deliver it to you. Some of them purposely delay the delivery and give it after the free-look period." Buyers then don't get the window to cancel the policy.

Mathpal adds, "If your agent hand-delivers the policy, take his signature and mention the date of policy receipt." It is the policyholder's responsibility to prove the date of receipt of policy document.

What you should do

If you have been mis-sold, take the best available route to minimise your loss. Mukul Chopra, senior partner, Victoriam Legalis-Advocates and Solicitors says, "If the policy's free-look period is not over, return it and ask for a refund."

One can even allow the policy to lapse or surrender it. Consult a financial advisor, and not your insurance agent, in this regard. Surrendering the policy means you stop paying the premium and cancel the policy contract before maturity date. Chopra says, "For a policy to have acquired a surrender value, at least three premiums should have been paid in a traditional policy, and as specified in other policies."

Another option is to take a loan from the insurer against the cash value accumulated in the policy. Chopra adds, "As long as the interest cost on the loan is less than the yield from the policy, you can use the loan amount to fund future premium payments, and encash the policy on maturity, thus avoiding a loss."

If you learn only after the end of the free-look period that vou were mis-sold a policy, then you can also wait for the lock-in period to end and exit thereafter. Nikhil Varma, managing partner, Miglani Varma & Co-Advocates, Solicitors and Consultants says, "You can also approach the insurer or the regulator to have your grievances redressed.'
