American Express JV gets final nod to launch operations in China

The approval comes against a backdrop of high Sino-US tensions, with disagreements over trade and Beijing's imposition of a national security law for Hong Kong

REUTERS
Shanghai, June 13

CHINA'S CENTRAL BANK has given the final nod to a network clearing license for an American Express joint venture, allowing it to be the first foreign credit card company to launch onshore operations in China. The approval comes against a backdrop of high Sino-US tensions, with disagreements over trade and Beijing's imposition of a national security law for Hong Kong.

The People's Bank of China (PBOC) said in a statement Saturday that it had approved the license for Express (Hangzhou) Technology Services Co, a joint venture between American Express and LianLian DigiTech Co Ltd.

It said the move reflected China's continued opening up of its financial industry.

The PBOC said in January that it had received American Express's application to start operations in China. In a statement, American Express said it expects to begin processing transactions later this year. "This approval represents an important step forward in our long-term growth strategy and is an historic moment, not only for American Express but for the continued growth and development of the payments industry in mainland China," Stephen J Squeri, chairman and chief executive officer of American Express, said.

The PBOC has also approved an application by Mastercard's China joint venture to conduct bank card clearing operations in the country, but the company has not yet received a network clearing license. Card giant Visa submitted its application in early 2018 and is still awaiting approval.

China is opening its local currency payments market to foreign companies after a decade of lobbying by foreign players seeking direct access to what is expected to soon become the world's biggest bank card market.

Bhel reports ₹1,534-crore net loss

FE BUREAU
New Delhi, June 13

STATE-RUN BHARAT Heavy Electricals (Bhel) on Saturday reported a net loss of ₹1,534.1 crore on a standalone basis for the three months to March, against a profit of ₹675.9 crore reported in the corresponding quarter a year ago. The company's revenue fell nearly 52% year-on-year (y-o-y) to ₹5,049.3 crore, mainly due to the disruptions caused by the country-wide lockdown.

The company pegged the impact of the coronavirus crisis on FY20 revenue at ₹4,000 crore. Bhel reported a loss of ₹1,472.9 crore for FY20, swinging from a profit of ₹1,208.7 crore in the preceding fiscal. In the final quarter, the company's manufacturing facilities and on-site project executions were inoperative from March 23, taking a toll on its revenues. Bhel's board did not recommend any final dividend amount for FY20.

The engineering and capital-goods firm spent ₹141 crore on finance cost in Q4FY20, up 46% y-o-y. The ₹825 crore of tax expense in the quarter was also 37.5% higher than the same period last year. Given the current stressed situation of the country's power sector, the company's revenue from the power industry—its main source of income—fell 61% to ₹3,174.7 crore in the quarter.

With power demand slowing down, Bhel wants to utilise the opportunity emerging from the coronavirus aftermath, where global firms are seen to adopt the strategy to decentralise manufacturing to mitigate disruption risks associated with concentrated and localised operations.

Beijing district in 'wartime emergency' after virus cluster

A cluster of novel coronavirus infections centred around a major wholesale market have sparked fears of a new wave of Covid-19

REUTERS
Beijing, June 13

BEIJING DISTRICT put itself on a "wartime" footing and the capital banned tourism and sports events on Saturday after a cluster of novel coronavirus infections centred around a major wholesale market sparked fears of a new wave of Covid-19. Forty-five people out of 517 tested with throat swabs at the Xinfadi market in the city's southwestern Fengtai district had tested positive for the coronavirus, Chu Junwei, a district official, told a briefing.

None were showing symptoms of Covid-19, he said, but added that 11 neighbourhoods in the vicinity of the market, which claims to be the largest agricultural wholesale market in Asia, had been locked down with 24-hour guards put in place. "In accordance with the principle of putting the safety of the masses and health first, we have adopted lockdown measures for the Xinfadi market and surrounding neighbourhoods," Chu said. The district is in a "wartime emergency mode," he added.

The closure of the market and new restrictions come as concerns grow about a second wave of the pandemic, which has infected more than 7.66 million people worldwide and killed more than 420,000. They also underline how even in countries which have had great success in curbing the spread of the virus, clusters can sometimes easily arise. The entire Xinfadi market was shut down at 3 am on Saturday (1900 GMT on Friday), after two men working at a meat research centre who had recently visited the market were reported to have the virus. It was not immediately clear how they had been infected.

On Saturday, market entrances were blocked and police stood guard. Beijing authorities had earlier halted beef and mutton trading at the market and had closed other wholesale markets around the city. They plan for more than 10,000 people at the Xinfadi market to take nucleic acid tests to detect coronavirus infections. According to the Xinfadi website, more than 1,500 tonnes of seafood, 18,000 tonnes of vegetables and 20,000 tonnes of fruit are traded at the market daily.

A city spokesman told the briefing that all six Covid-19 patients confirmed in Beijing on Friday had visited the Xinfadi market. The capital will suspend sports events and tourists from other parts of China, effective immediately, he said. Beijing's Yonghe temple and National Theatre also announced they would close from Saturday, and the city government said it had dropped plans to reopen schools on Monday for students in grades one through three because of the new cases. One person at an agricultural market in the city's northwestern Haidian district also tested positive for the coronavirus, Chu said.

Highlighting the new sense of alarm within the city, health authorities visited the home of a Reuters reporter in Beijing's Dongcheng district on Saturday to ask whether she had visited the Xinfadi market, which is 15 km (9 miles) away. They said the visit was part of patrols Dongcheng was conducting. And following reports in state-run newspapers that the coronavirus was discovered on chopping boards used for imported salmon at the market, major supermarkets in Beijing removed salmon from their shelves overnight.

That concern also spread to other cities, with a major agricultural wholesale market in Chengdu, the capital of the southwestern province of Sichuan, saying it would remove salmon products from its shelves on Saturday. In Nanjing, capital of the eastern province of Jiangsu, a local association of restaurants said it would halt the serving of foods containing raw seafood or animal products.

JPMorgan's Marko Kolanovic drops caution on stocks, says buy the dip

BLOOMBERG
June 13

MARKO KOLANOVIC, WHO two weeks ago tempered his bullish stance on stocks because of worsening geopolitical tensions, says now is the time to move back in. A drop such as Thursday's should be bought, according to JPMorgan Chase & Co's quant guru. His reasoning is that it occurred in the absence of a further deterioration in US-China relations.

Kolanovic considers the three principal risks to US stocks to be that of the relationship, the Covid-19 pandemic and the domestic social unrest. A potential source of equity demand may be hedge funds, which have generally refrained from joining the equity rally, Kolanovic predicts.

Trend-following traders are likely to start raising equity exposure this summer, with volatility sitting at current levels, based on the firm's model. Then stock pickers will follow, buying the dips "opportunistically," he says. "With the recent market pullback, we are again more comfortable with taking a positive view," Kolanovic wrote in a note to clients. "Positioning in equities did not increase significantly and China risks appear to be abating."

Stocks rose on Friday as the S&P 500 recovered some of Thursday's 5.9% drop, which was the worst since March. Equities sold off earlier this week with signs of a second wave of Coronavirus infections emerging in some states. Kolanovic brushed aside the threat of a second wave in terms of a need for broad economic shut-downs, calling it "unlikely" given the knowledge about the virus already obtained during the outbreak.

Kolanovic urged investors to buy the dip in early March amid the fastest bear-market decline on record.

US Prez says he will leave office peacefully if he loses election in November

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
Washington, June 13

US PRESIDENT DONALD Trump has sought to dismiss fears that he might not leave office willingly if he lost the election in November, but said if he failed to get reelected, it would be a "bad thing" for the country. Though the president has never given any serious indication that he might not leave office if he were to lose reelection, his comments aired on Friday appear to be the first time he has publicly committed to doing so, the Politico noted.

"Certainly, if I don't win, I don't win," Trump told Fox News in an interview that was aired on Friday. If he does not win the election scheduled for November 3, Trump continued, "you go on, do other things."

Trump administration revokes transgender health protection

IN A MOVE applauded by President Trump's conservative religious base, his administration on Friday finalised a rule that overturns Obama-era protections for transgender people against sex discrimination in health care. The Department of Health and Human Services said it will enforce sex discrimination protections "according to the plain meaning of the word 'sex' as male or female and as determined by biology." AP
