2-wheelers prove to be a better bet for manufacturers

KESHINA KANT
Mumbai, 12 October

Two-wheelers have turned out to be a better bet for auto makers, compared to passenger cars and sports utility vehicles (SUVs). Sales of passenger vehicles (PVs), including SUVs, had declined to a four-year low of 2.43 million in FY20 even as the two-wheeler market grew 9 percent between FY16 and FY20. In FY20, domestic PV sales slid 22 per cent year-on-year (YoY) to 2.65 million units, while two-wheeler sales declined 18 per cent YoY to 1.74 million.

IN TOP GEAR
Historical trend in the domestic sales ratio of two-wheelers to passenger vehicles

Analysts attribute this to the slowdown in the job market, which has a bigger economic impact on urban India. "Most people usually start with the purchase of two-wheelers when they land their first job, and then upgrade to cars or SUVs as their income improves. This conversion is no more happening as fast as in the past," says Jinesh Gandhi of Motilal Oswal Financial Services. Other regions and smaller towns, which are more popular in rural settings and smaller towns, in four-wheelers attract more demand in metros and big cities.

The economic slowdown seems to have had a bigger impact on purchasing power in metros and big cities. This has translated into a healthier hit on car sales," says Shaileendra Kumar, chief investment officer of Namdolia Securities. Consequently, the 'two-wheeler to car' ratio has seen an uptick. There were 4.8 two-wheelers for every PV 10 years ago, but the ratio is spiking to a 17-year high of 6.7x. This has led to a situation where auto makers such as Honda are making higher revenues and profits from two-wheelers. In FY19, Honda Motorcycles & Scooters India reported revenues of ₹2,000 crore, vis-à-vis ₹1,000 crore clocked by Honda Cars India.

Similarly, Honda's two-wheeler venture in India reported an operating profit of nearly ₹550 crore in FY19, against ₹1,400 crore reported by Honda Cars. Honda is among the few auto makers with a strong presence in both two-wheelers and passenger cars. Data for FY20 was not available for any of the Honda-based entities in India. Analysts say this has caused the deviation

Auto parts firms see sharp recovery

SHALY SETHI MOHILE
Mumbai, 12 October

A sequential improvement in auto volumes in the past few months has helped component makers reach 60-65 per cent capacity utilisation of pre-Covid levels, in September. With the exception of those supplying to commercial vehicles—a segment which is yet to see a broad-based recovery—majority of the component makers are bullish on the road ahead. This is in sharp contrast to the narrative in the April-June quarter when a severe contraction in the order books had made firms sceptical of recovery. But as companies aren't celebrating just as yet and continue to tread with caution. The real litmus test of demand sustenance will be period after the festivals.

"We are optimistically cautious. There is a lot of demand pressure from customers even as the challenges related to supply chain continue. We hope demand is sustainable post the festive season," said Deepak Jain, president of Auto Component Manufacturers (ACMA). Nirmal K Minda, chairman and managing director, Minda Industries, agrees. "We are hopeful about October and November. But not sure the demand will pan out from December. We expect December volumes to drop 10 per cent once the festive demand dries up if the drop is higher. It will be tough," said Minda. Capacity utilisation of auto component firms was hovering around sub-30 per cent for May and June, against a breakeven of 40-45 per cent, according to an ICRA report released on October 8. "Interaction with passenger vehicle and two-wheeler focused auto ancillary players like Minda, Varro and Mahindra ICE suggest utilisation levels for October to 75 per cent in September against the

BULLISH TREND

- From sub-30% in Q1, utilisation levels improved to 60-65% in Q2
- Most expected demand in Q2 during the festive season
- Trend may not hold after the festivals and may drop, it is felt
- ICRA expects only a small number of players under its coverage to opt for debt restructuring ingly in FY22. It believes that the previous year's restructuring for loan restructuring as part of the KV Kamath Committee's recommendations would be relatively low and largely restricted to smaller players. The recovery has been a confidence booster. "As of now, I do not think that auto component is stressed. The situation should shift towards personal mobility and facing impact of price hikes as driving sales.

Deccan Value Investors wants 'win-win' solution for Amtek

SHRUTI ANAND DUTT
Kolkata, 12 October

US-based hedge fund Deccan Value Investors says it is ready for the Amtek Auto deal, but insists that lenders must fulfill conditions they signed for. Last month, Amtek Auto had triggered the force majeure clause citing deteriorating performance of Amtek Auto in the wake of Covid-19. Speaking to Business Standard, Vini Bodas, managing partner, DVI, said, "We are not willing to remain ready to the deal as soon as the lenders fulfill the conditions that they themselves signed."

He said that the question of walking away and withdrawal of the table for discussion is not applicable here. "All that we ask is, treat us fairly and not act unilaterally. We are willing to come to the table for discussion to have a win-win solution."

DVI CONDITIONS

- ₹2,700 cr be the bid amount
- ₹500 cr cash component of the bid amount
- ₹2,500 cr amount Amtek owes to creditors
- DVI says condition precedents not met
- 3 condition precedents: long-stop date, land lease deal & force majeure clause

tion—had to be made proper as the lease was not valid. Third was the force majeure clause. "All these events happened. But lenders are accusing us of wriggling out and walking away. In fact, a strong case can be made that the banks are acting in bad faith," said Bodas. He said that the question of walking away and withdrawal of the table for discussion is not applicable here. "All that we ask is, treat us fairly and not act unilaterally. We are willing to come to the table for discussion to have a win-win solution."

Amtek since June. "We have made an assessment based on what we could do about what to the company several times, asking for information on performance in July, August, and September. But they haven't responded. That is not in the spirit of the deal," he said. DVI triggered force majeure as the performance thresholds in the lease had been breached, which was based on the assessment made in June. "I thought that the banks would accept that the contract is void, given that several conditions were not met, and then show us the numbers and we could talk about what to do. Instead, they are using the courts to see if they can get a judgment in their favour in a clear-cut victory. We have full confidence in Indian courts. But it's tricky that large banks are setting a precedent that they will not honourably litigated contracts," Bodas said.
