'SBI will prefer co-origination models of lending to MSMEs'

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA

SBI WILL PREFER the co-origi-nation model to cater to the financing needs of MSMEs and collaboration with fintechs is a good idea as it helps in assess-ing the risk profile of the bor-rower in a better manner, its chairman Dinesh Kumar Khara said on Saturday Point-ing out that MSMEs are con-strained todawin terms of each khara said on Saturday, Pointing out that MSMEs are constrained today in terms of cash flows, time gap in realising receivables, among others and also the level of lenders' confidence in funding them, khara said collaborating is a better model than lending directly to MSMEs.

"The fact of the matter is that today not many NBFCs have come in this space. And of late, when it comes to finding solutions, we feel that apart from lending directly to the MSMEs, there is a way forward in terms of collaborating with these NBFCs along with the biggest finches who have the ability to process the structured and unstructured (financia) data to have a better sense in terms of assessment of risk," Khara saild.

Khara said.
Based on that assessment, he said, bankers feel very comfortable in lending to the MSMEs. He was speaking at a webinar on financing the unfinanced organised by the Global Alliance for Mass Entrepreneurship (GAME).
There could also be another option of financing based on the cash flow and not on the basis for balances sheet because the cash flow and not on the basis of balance sheet because very often it is observed that the balance sheet and the financial statement are not available in a form which is expected by any banker, he added. Also, there is a broad spectrum of MSMEs in the countrywhich work in a host of areas and often the kind of financial information coming from them is not very organfrom them is not very organ-ised, Khara explained.

So to the extent where the data is fully organised, which is more like any other large corporate, it is the kind of spectrum which SBI is engaging with, he said.
