ADVERTORIAL

Maharashtra is blessed with a veritable bouquet of tourist attractions. A long coastline with white sandy beaches exotic wildlife sanctuaries, cloud-kissed hill stations, impenetrable forts with tons of history lessons, ancient caves dating back to the 2nd century BC...the list goes on and on. On World Tourism Day, we pay tribute to this tourism paradise

to the 2nd century

IT'S NO SECRE that Maharashtra attracts tourists from different states and foreign countries all year round. It perpetually ranks among the most visited Indian state by foreigners and domestic tourists alleke And for good reason too. Maharashtra is the third largest state in the country, and unquestionably the most industrialized. Its frontline cities include Pune, Nagpur, And, of course, there's Mumbal, India's financial capital, city of dreams, home of Bollywood, cricket's holy Mecca, and what-have-you-not. Often described as the "Gateway to the Heart of India', Maharashtra, the land of everything unlimited, invites you into its widespread plethora of attractions. It is adorned by the beautiful Salvyadri vanges of the Western Ghats with high mountains that disappear into the morning mist, while the sprawiing belt of the Konkan Coast mesmerises the eyes by its white beaches. Bordered by the Arabian Sea on Bordered by the Arabian Sea on its west, Maharashtra has as many beaches as the colours of the ocean. Here, the translucent waters of the Konkan gently lap onto pristine white sands. There, the azure bluegreen of the Shreewardhan belt encourages the adventurous to plunge in. The state's 700 km stretch along the Arabian Sea, makes you experience love at first sight.

If you wish to completely escape the chaos, Maharashtra's beaches will soothe city-weary souls. Khilm, Marve, and Madh are just an hour's drive from big-city Mumbai but, they transform the landscape. Breathe in fresh, pollution-free oxygen. Take a de-stressing languld stroll amongst dense coccount trees on Vengurla's fine white sands with cashew, jackfruit, and mango orchards. Indulge in village banter over crisp, fried fish at Shivaji's Sindhudurg or Murud-Janjira. The adventurous could water-scooter or snorkel in the clear waters of Tarkarli to watch sea creatures. Or swim in the sandy, calm Velneshwar's picturesque beach for hydro-therapy. Whether you enjoy bustling promenades or the serenity of secluded alcoves, Maharashtra has them all.

HILL STATIONS

The Western Ghats, blessed by the altitude of the Sahyadri Ranges, envelop little sleepy hollows. These petite hill-stations, popularised by the British Raj to beat the Indian heat, are jewels in the hills. In the mornings, sunbeams play hide-and-seek through the rolling dawn mist. By afternoon, they are still contants to their height. As evening falls, they bundle up in blankets of fog, toasty aromas walfing from local pots.

From north to south, the Western Ghats rise steeply. Some ranges dip straight into the Arablan Sea, while others meander around, jumping over waterfalls and lakes. Each of the major cities in Maharashtra has the bounty of a hill station within a few hours' driving distance. So rich and varied is the state's topography that each of these homes in the hills is unique. Let no cynic tell you that two hill-stations are similar; each has its characteristic charm, charisma, and allure.

CAVES

Deep, dark, and mysterious, there is a secretive live to ancient caves that eludes the brightness of sunbeams and radiates ancient history. Maharashtra, home to the largest number of caves in India, snuggles within its awe-inspiring Sahyadri Range caves of all sizes, shapes, and hues. From ancient rock-cut ones to ones with intricate sculptures that have housed reigning deities since time immemorial, these caves are fascinating archaeological legacies.

FORTS

On land and ocean, the atrength of stone stands mighty over years. The Maratha heartland is fortified yo over 305 forts - the largest number in any state in India. Here, the crimson-edged sword of the Maratha ruler Chhatrapait Shivaji Mahara'js gleams with the pride of a victorious warrior. The once-proud bastions of the army today stand silent and dignified. Battered by the weather gods, often plundered, walls crumbling in sections and roofs blown away, yet the forts of Maharashtra exude

WILDLIFE SANCTUARIES
There is nothing to beat the sight of a tiger crossing the very path on which your jeep has been travelling. It can actually make your heart skip a few beats. And just as fascinating can be the sight of a bird high up in the branches, dazzling the surrounding landscape with its bountiful colours. Nature, which controls its flora and fauns, has in that sense been very favourable to Maharashtra, which has some of the largest wildlife sanctuaries located in ecological hotspots that attract both the researchers and tourists in huge numbers.

Of these, the Meighat Tiger Reserve is one of the best known in the country Located at the border of Maharahstra and Madhya Pradesh, you may not only come across the majestic tiger in this reserve but also a wide variety of other animals and birds, including the very clusive forest owlet. The giant flying squirrel is also a rare sighting here.
