ReNew Power plans to take part in solar PLI scheme

SHREYA JAI
New Delhi, 8 July

Goldman Sachs-backed ReNew Power is planning to participate in the production-linked incentive (PLI) scheme for solar manufacturing, thereby expanding its portfolio from generation and transmission to manufacturing as well.

Gurugram-based ReNew is one of the top five renewable energy firms in India with a solar and wind power portfolio of 9.8 Gw of commissioned and under-construction capacity.

Suman Sinha, chairman and managing director of ReNew Power, said India's plan to encourage local manufacturing through imposition of import duties and schemes such as PLI was a good move. "We are interested because we believe it is important for us as a market leader to play a role in adhering to the government's plans and also providing ourselves with back-end supply and backward diversification. So, for that reason we are looking to set up manufacturing capacity and we would like to apply for the PLI," Sinha said.

ReNew has announced its entry into solar manufacturing, power transmission, and power distribution. It also participated in a tender for privatisation of power distribution in Dadar & Nager Haveli, Daman & Diu. The firm plans to expand in energy storage and hybrid power projects.

Sinha said the government's plan to reduce dependence on one country (China) with which it has geo-strategic issues was correct. "It would lead to some degree of disruption till the time adequate domestic capacity is built. But India is going to be a big enough market that we can afford to set up competing manufacturing destinations," he said.
