This summer is not a one-off-affair. India has been facing hotter summers and milder winters over the past few years. Heat waves have intensified, sending power demand up by over 8 per cent in 2021-22. That compares with average electricity demand growth rate of 5.2 per cent over 20 years. India's electricity demand is projected to grow by almost 5 per cent per year to 2040, the IEA says, which indicates that growth rates will be much higher in the next few years before plateauing. The Central Electricity Authority (CEA) expects demand for electricity to grow by 2.7 per cent to 1.874 billion kilowatt hours in the year ending March 2027. Because of seasonality, availability from wind and hydro will be limited this summer while solar might pro-vide some respite, though additional generation from it will be limited considering past trends. So the onus falls on thermal plants to service. past trends. So the onus falls on thermal plants to service the incremental demand, Gandhi said. Domestic coal plants are running at requisite plantload factor as of February 2023, but it is the gas and imported coal plants that will need to brace for servicing incremental demand, if we are to avoid last summer's power to avoid last summer's power. incremental demand, if we are to avoid last summer's power outages, Gandhi added. Imported coal-fired facilities are operated at around 21 per cent utilisation, and most gas-fired facilities are hardly operational because of the high cost of LNG.

ational because of the high cost of LNG.

It was either a miscalculation by Narendra Modi's government over the extent of growth in power demand post-pandemic, or a blind belief in the power of renewables to power an anticipated 8 per cent of GDP growth annually, meet demand from higher use of air conditioning, and cater to an emerging new class of consumers — electric vehicle owners.

India may need 800 Gw of renewables by 2030 to generate half its power from non-fossil fuel sources, according on energy think tank TERI. That involves adding 80-100 Gw a year of renewables, or around 680 Gw units 2030. Leave the research with the local control of the control the country's requirements. India may add only 165 Gw of india may add only los Gw of capacity over five years, aver-aging 33 Gw annually, accord-ing to a CEA document. New solar plants would make up 93 Gw and wind power another 25 Gw. CEA's estimates are based CFA's estimates are based on ground realities. Variable renewable energy tenders issued annually in India have fallen from 40 Gw in 2019 to about 28 Gw in 2022, according to US think tank Institute for Energy Economics and Financial Analysis. The total tenders issued for solar, wind and hybrid from 2010 to 2022. amounted to only 161 Gw, with amounted to only I6I GW, with an allotted capacity of IM GW. India needs six times that number in the next seven years to make renewables a dependable source of power. For instance, power shortages touched 2.7 billion until state April, which could have been avoided with an additional 22 GW solar plus II GW of storage.

avoided with an additional 22 Gw solar plus II Gw of storage. But corrective measures are underway where the government has scrapped plans to retire old generators, a top government official said. In fact, coal will play a key role in India's new energy security doctrine.

The spectre of coal looms large over India for the next few decades. The power ministry had advised the closure of coal-lired generators older than 25 years by 2030, amounting to around 50-60 Gw or a quarter of the current coal fleet, to meet India's net zero objectives by 2070. That plan is off the table, an official said. Instead, old generators will operate at lower loads. Coal-fired capacity of around 25 Gw is under construction and will be operational in a few years. New coal-fired plants are being proposed after the government decided to use thermal power as an option for flexible power store. India's net line we project.

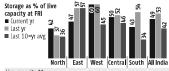

option for flexible power stor-age. India will now give prior-ity to cheaper thermal over high-cost battery storage, the official said.

As summers Joom over India, water levels in the 143-odd reservoirs across the country will be a key parameter that will be regularly monitored. According to the latest data from the Central Water Commission (CWC), as on March 9, the overall water storage position in the reservoirs of the country is less than the corresponding period of last year but is better than the average storage of the last 10 years during the corresponding period.

According to the reservoirs' bulletin, the live storage available in these reservoirs is 86.449 billion cubic metres (BCM), which is 49 per cent of the total live storage capacity

Last year during the same period, the total water available in these reservoirs was 53 per cent of the live storage capacity.

However, the water available this year is significantly higher than the 10-year average storage (75.218 BCM).
