Sikh man, son killed in Canada gang clash

Ottawa: An Indian-origin Sikh man, described as a "higher-level figure" in the organised crime scene in Canada, and his 11-year-old son were shot and killed in what police have called a "sick and twisted" escalation of gang violence in the city of Edmonton.

Harpreet Singh Uppal, 41, and his son were gunned down outside a fuel station on Thursday afternoon in a brazen, daytime shooting. Edmonton Police Services acting Superintendent Colin Derksen told the media on Friday.

The boy's young friend, who was in Uppal's car at the time, survived with no physical injuries. Derksen said the police do not know whether the shooter or shooters knew children were in the car when they began following Uppal.

"But what we do know, sadly, is that once the shooter or the shooters learned that the son was there, they intentionally shot and killed him," the Edmonton Journal quoted Derksen as saying.

He added killing children was once a "line in the sand" gang members refused to cross, but that is changing.

"That is sick and twisted," Derksen said. "I think most gang members would agree." Police have not released the name of the boy, pending an autopsy. Derksen said a suspect vehicle — a stolen 2012 BMW X3 — was located on fire north of Beaumont. No one was located inside the vehicle and no injuries were reported.

Gaza babies bear bombing brunt

"Surgeries have had to stop. Kidney dialysis has stopped and the neonatal unit is in a very dire situation," said the director of Al-Shifa, Dr Mohammed Abu Salimiya. "A baby has died because of lack of oxygen and electricity and heat."

Highlighting the dangers to hospitals on Friday, at least one projectile struck inside the Al-Shifa complex and a video appeared to show people being turned back by gunfire as they tried to evacuate an over-crowded hospital. The strikes and fighting are threatening the lives of hundreds of Palestinians who have sought shelter in Al-Shifa, believing it would be the safest place.

The hospital has 37 premature babies in incubators. Medhat Abbas, the director-general of Gaza's health ministry, said in a text message on Saturday, adding that medical staff had been performing manual artificial respiration on some of them for three hours.

The power outage is the result of an Israeli siege of Gaza for the past month that has cut off water, food, electricity and fuel.

Israel imposed the siege days after an attack on Israel's Hamas that killed more than 1,000 people, according to the Israeli authorities.

The lack of power has forced surgeons to operate by flashlight and doctors and nurses to run ventilators by hand to keep patients alive.

Food, water and medicine are also in extremely short supply and medical workers have reported that they have had to perform some surgeries, including eye operations and brain operations, without anaesthesia.

Iran hails Hamas for its resistance

Dubai: Iranian President Ebrahim Raisi on Saturday hailed the Palestinian group Hamas for its resistance against Israel and urged Islamic countries to launch sanctions against Israel.

"There is no other way but to resist Israel, we kiss the hands of Hamas for its resistance against Israel," Raisi said in his speech at the Islamic-Arab summit in Riyadh. He also called on Islamic countries to impose oil and goods sanctions on Israel.

"Gaza is not an arena for words. It should be for action," Raisi said at Tehran airport before departing for the summit.

"Today, the unity of the Islamic countries is very important," he added.

It is his first visit to Saudi Arabia by an Iranian head of state since Tehran and Riyadh ended years of hostility under a China-brokered deal in March.

"The summit will send a strong message to warmongers in the region and result in the cessation of war crimes in Palestine," Iranian foreign minister Hossein Amir-Abdollahian, who is accompanying Raisi, was quoted as saying by the Fardolot government website.

"America says it doesn't want an expansion of the war and has sent messages to Iran that it is not in the war (in effect). But these statements are not consistent with America's actions," Raisi said in the televised comments at Tehran airport.

"The war machine in Gaza is in the hands of America, which is preventing a cessation of Gaza and escalating the war. The world must see the true face of America," Raisi said.

Saudi Crown Prince Mohammed bin Salman on Friday condemned "what the Gaza Strip is facing from military assault, targeting of civilians, the violations of international law by the Israeli occupation authorities."

Israel mulls Hamas deal on hostages

New York: Hamas and Israel are negotiating two hostage release proposals, one involving a small number of people and one that could involve 100 or more civilians being held in the Gaza Strip, according to officials briefed on the talks.

Hamas and other Palestinian groups are holding around 240 people hostage in Gaza, according to Israeli officials and others briefed on the talks. A little less than half of them are civilians, and the larger deal being negotiated would involve the release of all of those, one official said.

Under one proposal being discussed, Hamas would release 10 to 20 civilian hostages — Israeli women and children as well as foreigners, including Americans — in exchange for a brief pause in hostilities, one official briefed on the talks said. That could be followed by a larger release of about 100 civilians if terms are met.

In exchange for releasing all the civilians, Hamas is asking for a brief pause, more humanitarian aid, fuel for hospitals and the release of women and children in Israeli prisons, the official said, adding that Israeli authorities had expressed uncertainty about releasing their prisoners.

Qatar, which hosts the political offices of Hamas, has been the main mediator in the talks, and senior US officials are also involved.

US officials have broadly endorsed the notion of Israel pausing its attacks in Gaza for a hostage release, saying this would allow humanitarian aid to enter Gaza and the hostages to leave. On Friday, secretary of state Antony Blinken said at a news conference in New Delhi. "We'll continue to focus relentlessly on getting our hostages home."

The office of Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu of Israel declined to comment. Hamas has refused to release any of the military-age Israeli men it is holding in Gaza, according to the officials.

One official said a complicating factor was that Hamas had told Qatar negotiators that it held 60 or fewer civilians and that the others were being held by Palestinian Islamic Jihad or other groups or individuals in Gaza who are not part of the Hamas command structure. The official said the governments involved in the talks had not independently verified this claim. In recent weeks, some Hamas officials have tried to argue that the group's fighters raised only military outposts in Israel on October 7, when armed men killed about 1,200 Israelis and took about 240 people hostage. But videos and other evidence show that Hamas also attacked civilians in their homes.

Hamas officials are telling negotiators that they are asking for a brief pause, more humanitarian aid, fuel for hospitals and the release of women and children in Israeli prisons, the official said.

Israeli officials have not released any breakdowns of military versus civilian hostages. Hamas released a small number of hostages in two rounds last month — one of an American mother and her daughter who also have Israeli citizenship and another of two elderly Israeli women. One earlier proposal for them to release about 50 hostages did not result in a deal.

William Burns, the CIA director, and David Bernes, the chief of Israel's Mossad, were in Gaza on Thursday for talks on the hostages. While US officials have not met with Hamas directly, Qatar officials have been negotiating with them on the proposed hostage release.

US and Israeli officials are deeply sceptical of various Hamas proposals. One official said a complicating factor was that Hamas had told Qatar negotiators that it held 60 or fewer civilians and that the others were being held by Palestinian Islamic Jihad or other groups or individuals in Gaza who are not part of the Hamas command structure. London police scuffle with protesters

London: A large pro-Palestinian march kicked off in London on Saturday following scuffles on Friday between far-right protesters and the police, who launched a major operation to avert clashes between the two rival groups.

The pro-Palestinian march, which is expected to attract thousands of people, has also drawn counter-protesters from far-right-wing groups to the capital on what is Britain's day of remembrance for war veterans.

London's Metropolitan Police said in a post on X, formerly Twitter, that they had faced aggression from counter-protesters who were in the city in "significant numbers", adding that they would not allow them to confront the pro-Palestinian rally. "We will use all the powers and tactics available to us to prevent that from happening," the police said.

The "National March for Palestine" is the latest in a series of rallies in the British capital to show support for the Palestinians and call for a cease-fire from Israel's bombardment of the Gaza Strip.

Ben Jamal, one of the organisers of the Palestine Solidarity Campaign (PSC), told Reuters up to a million people could join the rally. He said it would be peaceful, but acknowledged the "heightened situation today."

As they gathered at the start point, pro-Palestinian protesters could be heard shouting "From the river to the sea, Palestine will be free", a rallying cry which is viewed by many Jews as antisemitic and a call for Israel's eradication.

The scuffles between police and the far-right counter-protesters took place close to the Cenotaph war memorial earlier on Saturday, where some of the counter-protesters chanted: "We want our country back."
