Chennai on front foot ahead of IPL final

Hotel, flight bookings have increased by 15%

SHINE JACOB
Chennai, 24 May

It seems all roads lead to Chennai as the MA Chidambaram Stadium prepares to host the Indian Premier League final on Sunday (May 26). The city is playing a perfect host, with hotels offering cricket-themed drinks and dishes.

The final is set to take place between Kolkata Knight Riders and the winner of Sunrisers Hyderabad (SRH) vs Rajasthan Royals (RR) IPL Qualifier 2 match on Friday.

"There has been a 15 per cent increase in flight and hotel bookings week-on-week for Chennai for the

Sunrisers Hyderabad batter Rahul Tripathi plays a shot during the Indian Premier League (IPL) Qualifier 2 match against Rajasthan Royals, on Friday

Sunday night. Travel demand for IPL this year has been the highest. Despite the higher arrivals during peak summer season, the majority of the travellers are booking tickets last minute, 0-3 days in advance," said an industry expert.

Local hotels too indicated a surge in demand. Interestingly, data by travel platform Ixigo shows non-stop flights for New Delhi-Chennai for this weekend are averaging ₹18,000-20,000 for a one-way ticket as compared to ₹7,000 on any other day.

But for fans, it's worth it. According to a BCCI source, preparations are going on war footing, like last year. Restaurants in the city too are gearing up for the mega event through special dishes and live screening. "The Willows Lounge Bar is introducing IPL-themed drinks as vibrant as the game and the live screening in the bar, already designed sports-themed, keeps the energy alive," said Nitesh Dubey, assistant manager, food and beverage, at The Westin Chennai Velachery. "The last time Chennai hosted an IPL final was back in 2012, which was also when KKR won their first ever IPL title beating the home team at their fortress. As the cricket-crazy Chennai crowd braces to experience a pulsating contest in the grandest showdown in franchise cricket after 12 years, the charged up KKR fans are awaiting the arrival of their opponent at the Chidambaram Stadium," said Siddharth Raman, chief executive officer, Sportz Interactive, a sports digital agency.

But a directive by IPL organisers to hotels is playing spoilsport this time. It prohibits marketing or hospitality promotions, contests, advertising, fantasy games or any other commercial activity that use IPL names, marks and proprietary content.

A naturalist's discovery of India

RANJANA BANERJI

This exploration of India's wild heritage by author, academic and naturalist Stephen Alter is not a journey through the country's few remaining wild areas. It is not a chronicle of India's animals, birds, fish and plants. It is not about ecology, environment, conservation or conflict. Rather, it is all of these things and much more.

In the last few pages of the book, reproduced on the back cover, Alter writes, "Wildness can be a state of mind. Over the past two years I have travelled thousands of kilometres to see hoobook gibbons in their natural habitat, snow leopards traversing remote, precipitous slopes, and Malabar trogon perched amidst a disorienting profusion of tropical foliage. Undisturbed, unsettled places have a raw and lonely beauty that evokes a sense of sanctity and leaves me entranced. Every naturalist is a pilgrim in search of ecological truths. To experience a wild environment and observe the species it sustains gives me a greater reverence for the mysteries of life, wherever or whatever they may be."

The focus of The Cobra's Gaze lies in the last two lines. Because Alter does quite a remarkable exploration in this book. He demonstrates the massive entanglement between the history of India, of its people, customs, rituals, geography and geology with the environment that nurtures it and in return gets nurtured.

We start, for instance, in Bhimbetka, as good a place to begin as any. Discovered in 1957, the rock shelters of Bhimbetka show evidence of continuous human occupation for 100,000 years. The famous rock paintings are dated from 10,000 years ago. Human, animal, mineral and vegetation are all here, from early depictions of hunting to prayers to gods, a pean to early human imagination.

Alter writes of the "spiritual significance of species other than our own" that he feels here. Through the scrub jungle of Madhya Pradesh, the traces of our ancient past mingle with the teeming wildlife, our yesterday and today in one place.

His own journey towards becoming a naturalist is presented in the first chapter, the books he read, the journeys of people he followed and the observations he made of humans and animals living together—the chipmunks in gardens and the lizards in our homes being two examples we are so used to that we do not think of them as wild. Or a photo of a cow and a peacock on an Indian street. And a description of the festival of Nag Panchami.

Early on, at Agumbe, he comes across a sacred grove, of the kind that will appear again and again across India, not just in the Western Ghats. The story of the fascination with snakes and the significance of snakes in ancient Hindu texts are both demonstrated in his telling of the story of the battle between the Great Naga Kaliya and the Great God Krishna on the banks of the Yamuna. We follow the cult and the myth and the worship of the serpent through Vrindavan and the Yamuna. As historian D D Kosambi has written, the fact that Krishna did not kill Kaliya underlines how Naga worship survived, the cobra's gaze undimmed. Snakes play an important role in the telling. Tigers, lions, leopards, frogs, macaques, mungers, nilgai, peacocks, hornbills, muggers, bees, tendu, ber, sal, banyan, peepul, kadamb, amalams... you name it and it's likely there in one of the sites visited.

We move from the Western Ghats to the Deccan to the Himalayas to the Satpura ranges. The diversity of landscapes and foliage is mesmerising. The range of the story extends from the Mahabharata to Khasi tradition, to the many people who contributed to the naming and collecting of Indian flora and fauna. You suddenly, unexpectedly, find yourself up against the Great Hedge of India, in the Chambal, when British colonialists punished salt smuggling—thanks to a tax they had unthinkingly imposed on salt—with thorn vegetation.

Or you may be immersed in the story of the girl, named Goongi—that Jim Corbett heard about and of whom other records were kept—brought up by a bear. Or perhaps somewhat more disturbingly, she was one of many women that the people of the area claimed beared kidnapped and mated with. Or Girnar, the last mountain that had its wings clipped in the days when mountains flew about in an unsettling manner, and there in the Gir forest, an encounter with two lionesses while on foot.

Or the hanging question of whether the cheetah was ever indigenous to India or merely an export from Africa.

Alter makes it clear that he is not an expert on conservation and nor is he a wildlife scientist. But the very scope of his experience and the depth of his study make him something of both. His feeling and empathy for his surroundings and his curiosity about the connections that envelop us make The Cobra's Gaze a fascinating read, an exploration into the wonder of the wild, of life and of imagination. This ability to hold both reality and dream in one thought is a delight.

The only grouse about this book is that the print is a little too small and sadly, the older one gets, the bigger a problem this becomes! In that context, it's best, perhaps, to immerse oneself in the folk songs of the Baiga and Gond communities, translated by Verrier Elwin and Shamrao Hivale: "Look at me with the strong eyes of youth/ In the cold days the trees are lowering/ The wind blows among the hills/ Bending like the treetops/ Take my hand, come with me/ For you have conquered me/ With the strong eyes of youth."

The reviewer is an independent journalist who writes on the media, politics and social issues.

तिबेटी हिमनद्यातून १५०० टन पाणी भेट

चीनची मालदीवमध्ये 'वॉटर डिप्लोमसी'

माले : चीनने तिबेट हिमनद्यामधून १५०० टन पाणी मालदीवला भेट दिले आहे. दान महिन्यांपेक्षा कमी कालावधीत ही अशी दुसरी देणगी आहे. इतकेच नव्हे, तर बदलत्या हवामानाचा फटका सहन करणाऱ्या मालदीव या छोट्या बेटांच्या देशात हवामान निरीक्षण प्रणाली अधिक सक्षम करणाऱ्या मालदीव आणि चीन सहकार्य करत आहेत. विशेषतः नोव्हेंबर २०२३ मध्ये चीन सारकं मोसमद सुत्रेहू. यानी मालदीवच्या अग्रस्थपदाची सुत्रे हत्ती घेतल्यापासून चीन सहकार्य वाढवले आहे. सुत्रेहू यानी परभार स्वीकारल्यापासून चीन देशाला संरक्षण उपकरणे पुरवण्यासाठीही मदत करत आहे.

चीनच्या झिझांग (तिबेट) स्वायत्त प्रदेशाने मालदीव सरकारला १५०० टन मिमरल वॉटर भेट दिले. परराष्ट्र मंत्रालयाने सांगितले की, भेट दिलेले पाणी पिण्याच्या टंचाईच्या काळात वापरण्यासाठी वितरित केले जाईल. यापूर्वी २७ मार्च रोजी मालदीव सरकारने चीनकडून १५०० टन पाण्याची अशीच खेप मिळवल्याची घोषणा केली होती. मालदीवमधील विनी राजतुंड वॉंग लिस्किन यानी देणगी सुपूर्द केल्याचा समाचार परराष्ट्र मंत्री मुरा झमरेर यानी सांगितले की, विशेषतः अडकानासक आणि संकटाच्या काळात चीन मालदीवचा चांगला मित्र राहिला आहे. मंत्री महोदयांनी शिन्जियांग स्वायत्त प्रदेशातील प्रवाल बेटांमध्ये पाणी कमी मालदीवमधील १९९२ बेटे मुखूतः कोरैर रीफ आणि सैंडबारने नसलेली आहेत. त्यामुळे तेथे भूकट आणि गोडे पाणी अत्यंत दुर्मिळ आहे आणि हवामान बदलामुळे पाण्याच्या समस्या वाढण्या आहेत. डिसेंबर २०१९ मध्ये भारताने माले वॉटर अॅड सॉल्यूशन कंपनी कोलॅमरेश्ममध्ये भीम आण लावल्यानंतर पाण्याच्या संकटादरम्यान 'ऑपरेशन नीर' राबवले होते. मात्र, आता मालदीव वॉटरकडून पाण्याची मदत घेत आहे.
