Flash floods inundate over 380 houses in Nepal

Kathmandu, Agency. Teams of Nepal Police, Armed Police Force and the Nepal Army have rescued more than 138 people last night, said Sushil Singh Rathore, spokesperson at the Metropolitan Police Office. Flash floods triggered by heavy rainfall have inundated over 380 houses and damaged several residential areas in Kathmandu, police said on Monday. Heavy rainfall on Sunday night inundated more than 100 places in Kathmandu. Teams of Nepal Police, Armed Police Force and the Nepal Army have rescued more than 138 people last night, said Sushil Singh Rathore, spokesperson at the Metropolitan Police Office. "Rescue work was carried out at Mulpani settlements on the bank of Manohara River, Kadagari, Teku and Bahluu around Ratneshwari. Most of the human settlements on the river banks in Kathmandu have been inundated by the flash floods. Kathmandu witnessed 105 mm of rainfall within four hours, according to officials. A total of 382 houses have been inundated by flash floods, the Metropolitan Police Office said. Areas including Tankeshwor, Dohi, Teku, Tachal, Balhuu, Naya Basuvar, Bhimsenchowk, Bhaktapur, Lalitpur, Lalitpur, Lalitpur and Lalitpur were largely inundated by the flash floods, it said. Meanwhile, seven people were injured after they were hit by lightning in Beton village in Dohadhangra district on Sunday. A dozen houses were also damaged in the lightning strike, police said.

Public support strong for Japan's Covid vaccine minister as next PM, says opinion poll

Tokyo, Agency. Taro Kono has long been a favoured candidate among voters for prime minister and has made no secret of wanting the job. Japanese voters strongly support Taro Kono, minister in charge of fighting COVID-19, as the next prime minister according to a second opinion poll, as potential candidates prepare to join what has become a wide-open contest for ruling party leader. Prime Minister Yoshihide Suga's shock Friday announcement he was stepping down has thrown a ruling Liberal Democratic Party (LDP) leadership race set for Sept 29 into disarray, with a wide array of candidates set to vie for the top job. The LDP's majority in parliament guarantees the winner will become prime minister. According to the survey by the Yomiuri Shimbun daily published on Monday, 23% of respondents said Kono, the minister in charge of vaccines, was the most suitable person to take over - echoing a Sunday poll that had 31.9% favouring Kono. Kono held a narrow edge over former defence minister Shigeru Ishiba, with 21%. Former foreign minister Fumio Kishida, who has already formally announced his candidacy, trailed with 12%. A former foreign and defence minister, the 58-year-old Kono, educated at Georgetown University and a fluent English speaker, has built a popular following among voters with an active social media presence in two languages and 2.3 million followers on his Japanese page alone. Kono has long been a favoured candidate among voters for prime minister and has made no secret of wanting the job, but party elders are wary of him for his outspokenness and reputation as a maverick. Others feel he is still too young for the job. Over the weekend, though, one TV network reported that Kono had given Suga's backing. Former defence minister Ishiba, 64, has had strong support among ruling and opposition party members in the past, defeating Suga's predecessor Shinzo Abe in the first round of a 2012 leadership election. He lost in a later round, when only lawmakers could vote, and has since lost two more leadership contests. Kishida, also 64, was seen as likely their last year when Abe quit due to illness, but his low-key, soft-spoken style typically lands him low in voter surveys. He has called for reducing income disparities and pledged support for the economically vulnerable. Unlike last year's leadership race, when Suga emerged the winner, this time ordinary party members at the prefectural level will also be able to vote, which could make the outcome harder to predict. Potential candidates spend a busy weekend meeting with other lawmakers, sounding them out for support, media said. Each needs to gather 20 supporters by Sept 17 to become a formal candidate, with the vote on Sept 29. Should the results be close, a second round would be held with only lawmakers allowed to vote. The winner will choose when to call a general election, likely to come anywhere from Oct 17 to as late as Nov 23. Abe's actions are being closely watched for signs of when he will support. Japan's longest-serving prime minister still retains influence in the mountains and in the mountains and the Taliban in Punjab which killed the Resistance spokesperson Fahim Dastgir and many of Masoud's family members. He asked Afghan forces to withdraw from the Taliban and urged the international community for support. "Resistance won't stop," he said.

Devastation caused by Covid reminds us that multilateralism is not working well enough : EAM

New Delhi/Candera : The devastation caused by the Covid-19 pandemic has called into question the model of globalisation that was practised till recently and makes a powerful case for a more de-centralized version. External Affairs Minister S. Jaishankar said on Monday and added that "resistance to reforming international organizations compels us to look for more practical and immediate solutions. And that, ladies and gentlemen, is the case for the Quad." He said that "even as the tectonic plates of geopolitics have been shifting, the Covid-19 pandemic has compelled a sharper crystallization of our thoughts on the challenges that we face. It has called into question the model of globalisation that was practised till recently and makes a powerful case for a more de-centralized version. "Many of us accept now that the establishment of more resilient and reliable supply chains are essential to de-risking the world economy... What it finally calls for is a more de-centralized version. External Affairs Minister S. Jaishankar said on Monday and added that "resistance to reforming international organizations compels us to look for more practical and immediate solutions. And that, ladies and gentlemen, is the case for the Quad." He said that "even as the tectonic plates of geopolitics have been shifting, the Covid-19 pandemic has

where the concepts of power and influence have acquired a new meaning, is the once-in-a-century pandemic which demands our imagination. "In this situation, the fate of our region cannot be left entirely in the hands of the decisions of a few. Those of us who have interests, capabilities and confidence must step forward. The G-7 could become the G-70, then our region too can surely find a head-banging path to progress. The Indo-Pacific is at the epicentre of the change. What is now critical is to ensure that our future is determined through a collective and participative exercise," Jaishankar said. He said that the last two decades have seen a real transformation in India's relations with its three Quad partners: the United States, Japan and Australia. All the four countries are members of ASEAN-led forums, including the East Asia Summit and the ASEAN Regional Forum and the Distance Ministers Meeting. They also strongly subscribe to the centrality of ASEAN so far as the Indian Ocean region is concerned. The four are also involved in multiple bilateral combinations with each other. Jaishankar, in the working of the Quad takes into account the consequences of globalisation, requirements of the global commons and the expression of converging interests and that the Indo-Pacific exercise as an example.

Ahmad Massoud says he is alive and resistance will continue

Kabul/Agency. Ahmad Massoud, the leader of the Resistance forces in Punjab, on Monday released an audio message saying that he is alive and in the north-eastern province and called on all Afghans to begin a national uprising against the Taliban. Hours after the Taliban claimed victory over the hold-out province of Punjab after a night of intense fighting, Massoud, who is believed to be hiding in the mountains of Punjab, released a 19-minute audio message on his Facebook page, stating that he is very much alive and that the Resistance will continue. He also said that Pakistan Air Force jets attacked his Taliban and added that the National Resistance Front destroyed some of the Pakistani jets and killed Pakistani regulars. He confirmed from a hardcover by Pakistan and the Taliban in Punjab which killed the Resistance spokesperson Fahim Dastgir and many of Masoud's family members. He asked Afghan forces to withdraw from the Taliban and urged the international community for support. "Resistance won't stop," he said.
