The public sector banking

He was speaking at the virtual launch of journalist Tamal Bandyopadhyay's book 'Pandemonium: The Great Indian Banking Tragedy'.

Acharya worked under Patel when much of the clean-up efforts were carried out. Under Rajan, the RBI had begun an asset quality review to find out hidden stress in balance sheets which led to a massive jump in dud assets, higher provisioning and eroded profits for lenders. Acharya said there are analysts who blame the efforts undertaken by RBI under Rajan and Patel for the current slowdown.

"When I see analysts talking about attributing the current slowdown to these governors, I feel really saddened that India doesn't recognise the good that some people have tried to do to put it on a better path," he said.

Acharya said in India, banks do not like to be "earnest" about the quality of their balance sheets and usually it takes over four years before an asset is recognised as being dud and provided for. Without explicitly blaming the government, Acharya said everyone knows who has "killed" the Indian banking system and cited opinions of Rajan and other former governors including YV Reddy, C Rangarajan, D Subbarao in the book, and also committees like the PJ Nayak panel which spoke about the need to lessen the government's role.

"We don't have governance in place for the public sector banks (PSBs). The government as the owner has failed, it has not empowered the boards to run the PSBs well and there is no discipline on the management through the shareholders," he said.

Speaking at the event, Subbarao acknowledged that NPA problems happened during his tenure, but added there were reasons beyond cronyism as well for the bad loans mess. These would include the push for restructuring of assets from RBI which would have helped some insolvent accounts stay afloat, court interventions and a sense of policy paralysis under the Manmohan Singh government, he said.

Acharya further said no one cares about the problems as well because of the sab chalta hai attitude."My observation is that no one seems to care because the entire social cost is being equalised through the taxpayer money. I think the real tragedy is for the children and the youth of our country who don't have as bright a future as we could provide them," he added.
