Israel's daily new Covid-19 deaths hit record high

Jerusalem, Israel's Ministry of Health reported 15 new coronavirus death cases on Tuesday, bringing the total death cases to 561. This is the highest daily increase of death cases since the outbreak of the pandemic in Israel in late February, as the previous record was 14, registered on Saturday, Xinhua reported. It is what it is: Bizarre Trump interview defines US Covid-19 response

New York, A remarkable soundbite — "It is what it is" — from a 37-minute US President Donald Trump interview telecast on HBO is emerging as a bizarre anthem for the catastrophic American experience with the coronavirus pandemic as the country's caseload spirals towards the 5 million mark. The virus has killed more than 157,000 Americans in less than 8 months since the first case and the US president is still touting "fantastic" US testing numbers as the defining metric of America's state of play. The US has the dubious distinction of leading the world in coronavirus cases after months of chaotic policy response and widespread resistance to masking up. Fact checked in real time, Trump repeatedly told his interviewer - Jonathon Swan of Axios - that America is showing more cases "because we are so much better at testing than any other country in the world." "We've tested more people than any other country, more than all of Europe put together times two, we have tested more people than anybody ever thought of. India has 1.4 billion people, they've done 11 million tests." Trump claimed that the "United States is lowest in numerous categories" basing his interpretation of deaths as a proportion of cases rather than as a proportion of population. "You can't do that," Trump said about assessing deaths as a proportion of total population. Trump insisted that deaths must be seen through the lens of total cases rather than population as the denominator. According to data from Johns Hopkins, America is currently recording 47 deaths per 100,000 people. The US has a 3.3 per cent case fatality ratio - which is deaths per 100 confirmed cases. "We're at the bottom of the list. We have four or five different lists. We have the lowest numbers by far," Trump repeated at Tuesday's White House news briefing. Trump's comments collide with the evidence on the coronavirus' relentless spread across America. —IANS

Decoy receptor neutralizes coronavirus in cell cultures: Study

New York, As the Covid-19 pandemic continues to spread, scientists are seeking ways to keep the coronavirus from infecting tissues once they're exposed, now a new study suggests luring the virus with a decoy - an engineered, free-floating receptor protein - binds the disease and blocks infection. SARS-CoV-2, the coronavirus that causes Covid-19, binds to a receptor called ACE2, which plays a number of roles in regulating blood pressure, blood volume, and inflammation. It is found in tissues throughout the body, but especially in the lungs, heart, arteries, kidneys and intestines. "Administering a decoy based on ACE2 might not only neutralize infection, but may have the additional benefit of rescuing lost ACE2 activity and directly treating aspects of COVID-19," said study researcher Erik Procko from the University of Illinois in the US. As a potential therapeutic agent, a decoy receptor has one advantage over other drugs: To evade it, the virus would have to mutate in a way that would make it less infectious.

SL goes to polls amid Covid pandemic

Colombo, Sri Lankans on Wednesday began voting in Parliamentary elections partly delayed by the COVID-19 pandemic. Voters have been asked to maintain social distancing and bring their own pens to the polls with special booths set up for those who are quarantining "for a contest that will end months of constitutional limbo in Sri Lanka," said media reports. The country has been without a Parliament since President Gotabaya Rajapaksa sacked the Assembly in March and then postponed elections scheduled for April citing the COVID-19 outbreak. Rajapaksa dismissed a constitutional article requiring him to summon parliament by early June, and has instead overseen one of the world's most stringent responses to the pandemic without the input or oversight of the leg
