Gender-responsive economic recovery and bouncing back better

More women lost jobs in India during the pandemic than men. Be it the overload of domestic work at a time of job cuts or forced migration, marginalised women in the unskilled economy have suffered the worst during the pandemic.

This compels us to relook at policies and enablers for women, who at this point make up half our productive human resource. How can we encourage women back into the workforce, remove the gap year bias and reintegrate them with the mainstream? How do we upskill them and harness their established strengths? How do we incentivise women-led businesses, make sure they have access to funds, encourage self-entrepreneurship, protect their rights to land-ownership? Will DBTs help? Can we ensure pay parity? Can there be a legal and rights-based framework to legitimise the unorganised women workforce?

Join us as we delve into these questions and more.
