learn to have pressed for his early retirement arguing his health issues were coming in the way of his functioning. This meant the CPI National Council, the party's highest decision-making body, will have to meet at least by next month to appoint Reddy's successor

Kerala CPI, the most vibrant party unit, could tilt the decision on Reddy's successor

There are indications that the party leadership has informally started deliberations for searching Reddy's successor. Among other things the views of the Kerala CPI, the most organisationally and electorally vibrant party unit of the party, could tilt the decision on Reddy's successor.

Reddy's decision to quit, incidentally, comes at a time when CPI is grappling with mounting organisational and electoral crisis with the party tally in Lok Sabha coming down to two—one less than CPM's three —, symbolic of the existential crisis of the two Communist parties.

Former Lok Sabha member Reddy (from Telangana) became CPI chief at the 2012 Patna Party Congress by succeeding AB Bardhan. Since then he has been re-elected twice: at Puducherry party Congress in 2015 and later at 2018 Kollam Party Congress.
