Deutsche Bank becomes headache for Germany

BLOOMBERG
BERLIN, August 29

GERMANY'S ECONOMIC DOWNTURN is reigniting fears in Angela Merkel's government about the future of its two largest lenders.

The push for Deutsche Bank and Commerzbank to merge talks created a massive backlash and eventually failed. Potential buyers are steering clear. Now, the administration is running out of options just when a looming recession fuels fears Germany's banks might not be prepared to weather another crisis, according to two senior officials with direct knowledge of the government's stance. The German Finance Ministry declined to comment. "If the economy enters into a recession, the banks are the first to get hit," says Danyal Bayaz, a Green party lawmaker on the lower house finance committee. The government can't do much at this stage other than a fiscal stimulus program to mitigate recession risks, he added.

The plan to merge Commerzbank and Deutsche Bank has been put on ice but not completely discarded, one person said. The idea would likely be resuscitated if either lender were to face a real threat to its future, the person said. Deutsche Bank, which once had ambitions to become a global player, recently announced a painful restructuring that aims to cut a fifth of its workforce and rip away a big chunk of its trading operations. Its renewed focus on German exporters comes just as the trade war between the US and China heats up and President Donald Trump has German car makers in sight. New banking troubles could have serious repercussions for domestic politics as well, with the governing parties at historic lows in the polls and under attack from populists and environmentalists. With Merkel's coalition hanging by a thread, a handout to bankers would be a nightmare for the chancellor, as she seeks to shore up her legacy.

China to showcase nuclear weapons

KJM VARMA
Beijing, August 29

CHINA WILL HOLD its biggest military parade showcasing some of the most "advanced weapons", including its nuclear arsenal, on October 1 as part of the 70th year of National Day celebration to demonstrate its enhanced deterrence and growing military might to the world.

China would put on a grand celebration, followed by a military parade and mass pageantry at Tiananmen Square on October 1, the National Day, to mark the 70th anniversary of the founding of the People's Republic of China (PRC), official media reported on Thursday. Some advanced weapons will make their debut in the military parade, the scale of which is scheduled to be greater than the ones commemorating the 50th and 60th founding anniversaries of the PRC, as well as the V-Day military parade in 2015, state-run Xinhua news agency reported.
