PURI FLAGS LARGE LIQUIDITY IN MARKET

High oil prices may remain a problem

Global crude prices have been volatile since September

FE BUREAU
New Delhi, October 11

HIGH OIL PRICES can remain a problem if large liquidity remains in the market even after the interest rate hikes by central banks, Minister of Petroleum and Natural Gas Hardeep Singh Puri said on Wednesday.

"If you already have a large amount of liquidity, and all those interest rate hikes that you have utilised and not been able to mop up that liquidity, then high oil prices remain a problem," Puri said. "Half the world faces recession, another half will go into more recession."

Oil prices have been following a very volatile trajectory since September after Saudi Arabia and Russia first extended their output cuts till the end of the year. Even as the markets saw prices moderating, a speculative risk premium was soon added to the prices owing to the recent Israel-Hamas war.

"I think the global markets will factor all things into account. And if the supply lines

HARDEEP SINGH PURI, MINISTER OF PETROLEUM AND NATURAL GAS

If you already have a large amount of liquidity, and all those interest rate hikes that you have utilised and not been able to mop up that liquidity, then high oil prices remain a problem

are not disrupted, hopefully, we will be able to navigate through," the minister said while talking about the speculations on oil market owing to the Israel-Hamas conflict that broke out last Saturday.

The oil minister also believes that India will be able to navigate through the situation.

"We are watching this on a real time basis. And I'm confident that we (India) will navigate through this both on availability and other factors."

Earlier this week, oil prices climbed 4% from their previous levels to $87 per barrel after the news of Hamas launching an attack at Israel. Although the region is neither a major producing nor exporting area of crude oil, concerns were raised if the war spreads to other regions of the Middle East as it accounts for almost one-third of the global oil production. If crude oil prices go up, that has a very strong and adverse impact on the attempts of global economic recovery, Puri said.

Further, reiterating his comments that India will account for 25% of the global energy demand growth over the next two decades, the minister said that the country's energy demand will continue to provide fuel for future economic growth. India, also in the recently concluded G20 summit, launched a Global Biofuel Alliance with the United States and Brazil, talking about which Puri said that the platform will facilitate knowledge sharing on key aspects such as best practices, technology development, and policy learnings.

ONGC arm keen on Sri Lankan blocks

ENS ECONOMIC BUREAU
New Delhi, October 11

ONGC VIDESH (OVL) is keen to participate in oil and gas exploration opportunities in Sri Lanka and is waiting for the island nation to unveil its roadmap and policy on developing the upstream petroleum industry. OVL is the overseas investment arm of India's state-owned oil and gas major ONGC. According to OVL's Managing Director Rajarshi Gupta, a presence in oil and gas assets in Sri Lanka would gain from the synergies of the larger ONGC group, as the parent company has significant upstream assets and infrastructure in southern India.

Geologically, the island nation and its offshore areas are quite similar to part of southern India, and ONGC is experienced in operating in such zones. Sri Lanka's Geographical proximity to India is also seen as a major attraction for OVL, Gupta added that OVL would be open to government-government negotiations, competitive bidding, or any other route that the Sri Lankan government decides on to enable participation in the island country's upstream petroleum sector.

Centre mulls extension of parboiled rice

India is the world's biggest rice exporter

Share of global trade in 2022-23

SIDDHARTHA SINGH & PRATIK PARIJA
October 11

INDIA, THE WORLD'S top rice exporter, may extend an export levy on parboiled rice to control local prices ahead of key polls, keeping the market tight and raising the risk of higher global food inflation.

The government is considering an extension to a 20% export levy, which is due to expire on Oct. 15, according to people familiar comment. A finance ministry spokesperson didn't immediately respond to a request for comment.

Prime Minister Narendra Modi will seek a third term in office at the election next year and the government he leads has also restricted exports of sugar and wheat, and is selling grains from state reserves.

Retail prices of rice in Delhi have surged 22% from a year earlier, while wheat is about 12% more expensive, according to data compiled by the food ministry. There are concerns that production of some crops, including sugar cane, could fall due to patchy rains in major growing areas the year.

Cumulative rainfall during the June-September monsoon season was the weakest in five years.

While rice prices in Asia have eased recently, there are lingering concerns about the potential impact from El Niño on production across the region. Any shortfall could spur a renewed rebound in prices and fuel inflation.

Curbs on sugar exports likely

INDIA IS EXPECTED to impose restrictions on its sugar exports after dry weather parched cane crops in the world's second-biggest grower, a move that will tighten global supplies of the sweetener.

India is likely to curb shipments during the new season that started Oct. 1, and a decision will be made soon, said people familiar with the matter who asked not to be identified as the talks are confidential. Quotas for some overseas sales can be issued if domestic supply improves, they said. India saw its weakest monsoon in five years and any drop in agricultural output will heap pressure on the government to control food inflation.
